FAR EASTERN PEACE CONFERENCE PROPOSAL

WARNING TO ARABS

HAIFA HARBOUR OPENING

STATEMENT OF POLICY

London, Oct. 31.
The magnificent new harbour at Haifa, the first to be constructed in Palestine since Herod built the port of Caesarea in honour of his Imperial patron, was formally opened to-day.

It transforms an unprotected roadstead into the finest harbour in the Levant.

Under British rule, Palestine has regained its pre-eminence as a trading centre and as a highway joining Western Asia with Northern Africa.

Palestine is actually one of the most prosperous countries in the world to-day and Haifa is the nerve centre of its commercial development.

The opening of the harbour, which has cost about £1,250,000, and which encloses an area of 400 acres, was to-day the occasion for an exchange of wireless messages between the High Commissioner, Sir Arthur Waugh, and the Colonial Secretary, Sir Philip Cunliffe List.

BRITISH LOAN

The High Commissioner expressed the belief that the harbour would result in an increase in prosperity to Palestine, whose rapidly expanding trade it was primarily designed to serve. He also referred to the fact that it would not have been built had not the British Government guaranteed the loan raised by the Palestine Government to provide the necessary capital.

The Colonial Secretary, after congratulating the Harbour Works Department and the consulting engineers, Messrs. Rendel, Palmer and Tritton, mentioned that during the four years of harbour construction, Arabs and Jews had worked together and that about 70 per cent. of its cost had been spent in Palestine itself. Having referred to the great value that such a harbour must be to Palestine, the Colonial Secretary made an outspoken reference to the recent riots.

PLAIN SPEAKING

"To-day's ceremony," he said, "is overshadowed by the deplorable disturbances which have taken place. I would speak very plainly to the people of Palestine. Thirteen years ago, Great Britain accepted the Mandate of Palestine. The Mandate carried with it a clear duty to the Arabs and to the Jews.

"That duty will be discharged fully and fairly without fear or favour.

"There is, under the Mandate, an obligation to facilitate the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people. But at the same time there is an equally definite obligation to safeguard the rights of all inhabitants of Palestine.

"Both obligations will be most carefully observed.

"It will be the constant aim of British policy to foster and promote the well being of all Palestine.

PLANS IN HAND

"Plans are now in hand in which the High Commissioner has had a great personal share which will materially benefit all classes of the community. That work will go forward.

"But there is paramount duty to preserve Law and Order. That duty too will be most thoroughly discharged.

TRIBUTE TO OFFICIALS

"I wish here to repeat the tribute I have already paid to all ranks of the police for the fort-

REASSEMBLY OF PARLIAMENT

Important Debate ON Disarmament

London, Oct. 31.
When Parliament reassembles next Tuesday, the first subject of importance to be debated will be the disarmament question, when the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, will be the chief speaker for the Government.—British Wireless.

YACHT ADVENTURE

WAR HERO'S LONE VOYAGE

ACROSS ATLANTIC FROM ENGLAND

London, Oct. 31.
An adventurous single-handed yachting trip across the Atlantic was brought to a triumphant conclusion to-day when Group Captain L.W.B. Rees, V.C., O.B.E., M.C., A.F.C., arrived at Nassau, in the Bahamas.

Group Captain Rees set out from Falmouth about three months ago on his long lone voyage in an eight-ton yacht, crossing the Atlantic, via the Azores.

The trip from the Azores to the Bahamas took sixty-four days, the ex-R.A.F. officer experiencing all sorts of weather, but coming through unscathed.

A.D.C. TO THE KING

Captain Rees was placed on the retired list two years ago after serving as A.D.C. to His Majesty the King for six years.

He won the Victoria Cross in France in 1916, by attacking single-handed, ten enemy planes, bringing down two and continuing the fight although severely wounded until the other eight machines had been scattered.—British Wireless.

BRITISH TREASURY RETURNS

Satisfactory Position Maintained

London, Oct. 31.
The latest Treasury returns show that the ordinary revenue for the current financial year up to October 28, amounted to £318,784,323.

At the corresponding date of last year, the amount stood at £311,670,954.

Ordinary expenditure to date for the current year totalled £377,644,882 as compared with £407,790,332 at the corresponding date of 1932.—British Wireless.

tude with which they have carried out their duty.

"Law and order will be maintained throughout the land. Palestine is fortunate in having at this time a High Commissioner devoted to its interests and who every man in Palestine knows in his heart is fair and just. He has the complete confidence of His Majesty's Government and I appeal to all men of goodwill to give him their loyal support and cooperation in his work for the common good of all.—British Wireless.

SUPPORT IN GERMAN CIRCLES

SYMPATHY WITH IDEAS OF JAPAN

GENERAL ARAKI'S MOTIVE

Berlin, Oct. 31.
The suggestion by the Japanese War Minister, General Araki, who recommends the early convocation of a Far Eastern Peace Conference, has aroused considerable interest in Germany.

The proposal finds warm support in Berlin semi-official circles, where it is declared that the peace of the Orient is of the greatest importance, not only for the Pacific countries, but also for States apparently not directly concerned in events in that part of the world.

General Araki, in making the proposal, seemed inclined to limit its scope, but German circles favour a large-scale conference.

NINE-POWER TREATY.—It would be of the greatest value, it is pointed out, in overhauling the Nine-Power Treaty and the Naval Treaties of London and Washington, and in bringing Japanese policy within the framework of international politics.

The other Japanese suggestion, of a Non-Aggression Pact with the Soviets is considered very significant in view of Japan's coolness when the Soviet proposed such a pact last year.

LITVINOFF'S MISSION

The Berliner Tageblatt considers that General Araki's plan is designed mainly to take the wind out of M. Litvinoff's sails when he goes to Washington to negotiate for the opening of diplomatic relations between the Soviet and the United States.—Reuter.

OIL EXPLOSION

COOLIE INJURED BY STOVE

Liu Hing, a coolie at the A.P.C. installation at North Point, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital yesterday suffering from burns as a result of an explosion of oil when he lighted a stove.

Hoi Kee, a workman employed at the Taihook Sugar Refinery, was injured yesterday when his hand was caught by machinery. He was taken to Hospital.

CYCLIST INJURED

As a Chinese, Chu Hi-kang, riding a push bicycle appeared at the junction of Nathan and Prince Edward Roads yesterday, he collided with a motor-bus at that moment turning round the corner from Nathan Road. The cyclist was thrown off his machine, and received injuries leading to his admission to the Kowloon Hospital.

Tang Fung, an amah employed at 44, Morrison Hill Road, drank bonnie yesterday in an attempt to take her life, and was conveyed to the Government Civil Hospital.

Mr. O. F. Alexander, the Traffic Inspector at Police Headquarters, is proceeding home on leave by the Empress of Canada on Friday. During Inspector Alexander's absence from the Colony, Inspector A. Nicoll will act as Traffic Inspector.

CIGARETTE BOOSTS

COUPON TRADING TO CEASE

U.K. MAKERS' DECISION

London, Oct. 31.
It is announced that the tobacco trade in the United Kingdom will cease what is known as coupon-trading at the end of this year.

The system has proved very costly and a meeting was held to-day of the Tobacco Trade Association, at which it was decided that coupons, certificates, vouchers or similar things, issued with cigarettes and having an exchangeable value will only be issued by the manufacturers up to December 31.

It will be possible for holders to redeem outstanding coupons up to the end of February, but after that date, they will become null and void.—Reuter.

INCREASING USE OF AIR MAIL

BRITISH LETTER FIGURES

London, Oct. 31.
During the quarter ended 30th September, 55,100 pounds of letter air mails were carried from Britain as compared with 39,846 lbs. during the corresponding quarter of 1932. Those to India alone were 14,052 lbs. as compared with 9,768 lbs.—British Wireless.

DISARMAMENT BUREAU

TO MEET ON DATE FIRST FIXED

London, Oct. 31.
The President of the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson announced to-day that the Bureau will meet on 9th November as originally proposed and not on 3rd November.—British Wireless.

WILD LIFE IN AFRICA

CONVENTION FOR PROTECTION

London, Oct. 31.
Fourteen countries were represented at the International Conference which opened at the House of Lords in London to-day to consider means of preserving and protecting the flora and fauna of Africa.

Lord Plymouth, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies, in welcoming the delegates, emphasised the need for new methods to control the indiscriminate destruction of wild life.

The British Government felt the problem was urgent and that the work of the Conference might well afford a basis for the protection of nature in other parts of the world.

Lord Onslow, who presided over the conference, recalled some of the articles in a draft convention prepared by the British Government with special reference to the constitution of national parks and reserves.

A general discussion followed and the conference will resume to-morrow.—British Wireless.

MASS MARRIAGE

FESTIVAL CELEBRATED IN ROME

Rome, Oct. 31.
Over 2,000 couples were married at dawn at the same moment in various churches of the city and province to-day, in celebration of the Fascist Marriage Festival.

The Festival was arranged in order to counteract the severe decline in the Italian birth rate.

Each couple received a photograph of Mussolini and a gift of 600 lire, presented by the Secretary of the Fascist Party, together with the traditional sugared almonds, given at all Italian weddings.

By special arrangement with the Holy See, the first children on the marriages solemnised to-day will be baptised in St. Peter's Rome. This privilege is usually severely restricted.—Reuter.

I told my wife to get behind the trees and to distract the attention of the bullock I ran to meet it. When a couple of yards distant the animal put its head to the ground and threw up its hind legs. I lashed out with the stick I was carrying and eventually the beast swerved and allowed me to proceed.

By this time my wife and children had reached the gates and the lodge-keeper, who had been attracted by the screams of my daughter, came out.

The herd was brought by the King to Windsor Great Park about 18 months ago. It is understood that the herd has just been sold and will be replaced by about 100 younger animals of the same breed.

NEW YORK NERVOUS

UNCERTAIN ABOUT THE GOLD POLICY

HOPE FOR TRUCE

New York, Oct. 31.
The stock market moved over a narrow range to-day, and closed the session off fractionally.

In spite of the fact that the dollar was lower and that the R.F.C. gold price was up 16 cents at $32.12, great uncertainty existed in financial and trading circles as to the effect that President Roosevelt's foreign gold policy would have both abroad and at home.

It is believed that the President has no desire to precipitate a currency depreciation race with other countries and it is sincerely to be hoped that a working agreement to raise world price levels will be the outcome of the current conference between British and American representatives in Washington.

It must be borne in mind that the President still has many more weapons in his financial armoury for the raising of the domestic price level and this expectation that these will be used if present methods do not succeed has buoyed the hopes of traders and the country in general. New York financial circles are opposed to any action which would tend to upset world conditions which are not too stable anyway.

The fact that the steel companies have agreed to meet the Federal Rail Coordinator, Joseph B. Eastman's rail price offer of $36.70 per ton is considered a very constructive move in the Government's progress toward helping the heavy industries.—per Swan, Culbertson and Fritz.

AVOIDING A CLASH

America Wants Britain To Co-operate

New York, Oct. 31.

The United States has assured Great Britain that no currency war is desired by the administration, and has invited British co-operation, according to the Washington correspondent of the Herald-Tribune.

Sir Frederick Leith-Ross has cabled to London for further instructions, with a view to establishing a loose dollar-pound link designed to raise the price of gold and in order not to overstrain the ratio between the two currencies, this correspondent adds.

The same authority states that the administration in Washington is hopeful of some co-operation from Great Britain, in spite of reports of a disagreement between Sir Frederick Leith-Ross and Professor Warren, one of President Roosevelt's advisors.

The New York Times believes that co-operation is possible if the United States promises to prevent further weakening of the dollar in relation to the pound at a level temporarily acceptable to Great Britain.—Reuter.

Many Obscurities

London, Oct. 31.

Too many obscurities have yet to be clarified before any definite view will be obtainable of the effect of the latest phase of President Roosevelt's experiment in gold purchasing abroad, declares the Times City Editor to-day.

Yesterday's American price of gold showed a wide margin of about 21 pence over the estimated London quotation at 8 o'clock. And even though this diversity makes no allowance for the possible cost of shipment, it is obviously an attractive price.—Reuter.

According to a report received by Messrs. Swann, Culbertson and Fritz last night, the American gold price yesterday was U.S.$32.12, a gain of 12 cents in a day.

Rehearsals for the Philharmonic Society's presentation of the "Pirates of Penzance" have now started. They will be held every Monday afternoon in the Cathedral Hall at 8.30 and every Friday evening at 8.45. All those interested are warmly invited to attend.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER XIV

"Through the Blackness"

"I may have sweet ideas, but returning to a comfortable bed at the Mermaid Hotel isn't one of them," said Leonard Sofon. "I mean to find a boat, Truelove, if I have to search the beach the whole night through."

"Well, if you jolly well think you're going to search alone, you're jolly well mistaken," responded Napoleon. "But look here, I say. Suppose we don't find one? Do we build one?"

"While we're about it, why not a couple?" smiled Leonard. "Then we'll have one each."

After a final glance round the luxurious chamber, they retraced their way through the narrow neck into the outer cave. There was no sign of the intruder, but for all that they walked cautiously to the cave entrance. Peering out, they saw no form and heard no footfall. The darkness was unpopulated saving for themselves.

"Be careful where you tread," advised Leonard, as they left the cave and stepped once more on to soft sand.

"What are there any bombs about?" replied Napoleon.

"No, but there are footprints. We don't want to obliterate the footprints of that person who followed us into the cave just now."

"Oh, I see. Are you really going to put Jim on the scent?"

"Certainly. It'll do no harm, anyway. Which way shall we walk? Left or right?"

"Shouldn't think it'd make much odds. It's guess-work, anyway."

"Not entirely. I want to know which way leads us soonest to a village. If we go to the right, there's Craverville, but that's about two miles off, isn't it? You know the geography of these parts better than I do."

"Yes, it's a devil of a way," answered Napoleon. "Everything's a devil of a way from here—station, church, and shops."

"Is there any village nearer?"

"How many huts make a village? There's a cluster of seven or eight a little way round the point."

"Are they fishermen's huts, by any chance?"

"Shouldn't be surprised. Yes, now I come to think of it, I have spotted a boat or two on that beach. They're black, tarry huts. You know the sort of thing. If the world's going right with you, you say, 'Oh, what a lovely smell of ozone!' but if it's not you seize your nose and cry, 'Bad fish!'"

"I like the sound of it," commented Leonard. "Let's try it."

So they turned leftwards, and retraced their way over the heavy sand to the gap. On their right, the sea whispered gently through the darkness. The light from the wreck no longer glowed.

At the gap, they paused.

"Can we get round the point?" queried Leonard.

"We'd have to climb over some jutting-out parts," replied Napoleon. "The tide's going out, but it's not low yet. Not a nice climb in the darkness, exactly!"

"Can't we get to your settlement by road, then? It ought to be easier, and we'd out the long track round."

"Good idea. I think I know the way. It's up the gap and then straight on instead of bearing to the right, and then we strike off somewhere to the left. Yes, I believe I can hit it."

They ascended the steep path, and veering away from the hotel lane, made their way across the neck of land that separated them from the north shore. Napoleon, to his own surprise even more than to his companion's, identified the correct lane that ultimately led to the little fishing settlement, and when they reached it he smiled triumphantly.

"Pretty good, eh?" he remarked, patting himself on the back.

"Though, of course, all one had to do was to follow the smell and trace it to its source."

"Yes, the smell's certainly strong," agreed Leonard, "but I rather think the world must be going right with me at this moment. I like it."

Eight or nine tiny black cottages nestled near the shore. Only one of them showed a light, a feeble, yellow gleam, betokening a waxy origin; and as they approached even this winked out.

But they were not interested in the cottages. Their eyes were skinned for other things, and, all at once, Leonard gave a low exclamation of pleasure.

"There we are!" he whispered. "I said the world was going right! We're in luck."

A black shape grew out of the sand ahead of them. It's outline was unmistakable. It was a small boat.

"Splendid," replied Napoleon, with a pang. "Now we're for it!"

The beach was utterly deserted, and the boat, fortunately, was not far from the edge of the water. The sands shivered more steeply here, and the distance covered by the tides was less extensive. Regardless of the law of possession, they ran the boat down to the water, and, obedient to Leonard's instructions, Napoleon climbed in.

"By the way, I suppose you can row?" queried Leonard, just before pushing off.

"On the Thames," answered Napoleon.

"Well, when we're beyond these little waves, we won't notice much difference. Get the oars out. You're going to do the work, while I navigate. Ready? Right! Heave—ho!"

He gave a shove, jumped, and the next moment they were gliding out into the mysterious velvet.

Distances and dimensions are exaggerated by night. Napoleon was astonished—very pleasantly so—by the smallness of the waves which had seemed so large while he had viewed their gleaming ridges from the shore. After a few strong strokes, they were beyond the breakers, and began to purr over an inky smooth expanse.

"By Jove!" murmured Napoleon. "I'd be perfectly happy if only there were a moon."

"And if I were somebody else?" queried Leonard.

"Yes, you could be improved on," admitted Napoleon. "All the same, I'm not complaining. But look here, I say—what about our direction?"

"Yes, that's going to be our chief difficulty. You see, Truelove, we're not starting from the spot I'd counted on. My compass reckoning has gone to pot. I expect we'll have to hug the shore a bit."

"No, we won't," exclaimed Napoleon suddenly. "There's the light again! Look!"

"So it is," murmured Leonard, gratefully. "That light is just going to save our lives!"

He whipped out his pocket compass, and got his bearings. Then, while Napoleon rowed, and he gave directions. The compass was a luminous one, and he did not have to use his flash lamp to see its face.

Napoleon rowed steadily. He decided not to think of the coming moments, but just to be satisfied that, so far, they had not come.

When his companion told him to pull to the right, he generally pulled to the right. Occasionally he forgot which was his right and which his left, however, and then fresh bearings had to be taken when the light from the wreck reappeared.

"They're not over-careful with their lights; I must say," observed Leonard, presently. "I should have thought they'd have been as careful as the deuce."

"That's assuming they have guilty consciences," retorted Napoleon. "Perhaps, you know, they haven't."

"It isn't usual to visit a wreck in the dead of night," Leonard reminded him.

"It may not be usual," agreed Napoleon. "But quite nice people do it. Have you noticed, the name of our boat, Daisy?"

"Well, isn't this the left—oh, no—my mistake," said Napoleon. "You know, that's the trouble with rowing. You have to sit with your back to where you're going. Idiomatic. That's why I prefer punting. Oh—a punt, and Boulton's Lock!"

They fell into a silence. They could not see the wreck, but they knew they were getting nearer every minute, and superfluous conversation became undesirable. Not only might their voices be heard, but it now became more necessary to concentrate on their task. The light had not glowed for some while, and Napoleon had been warned that he must keep as straight a course as was humanly possible.

"Wish the light would tune up again," he murmured, once.

"Between you and me, I'm rather glad it hasn't," Leonard whispered back. "It may mean that whoever are on that wreck have moved to another part of the ship. Down below, for instance."

"Or it may mean they've spotted us, and are watching us," added Napoleon, grimly.

"Who's getting the sweet ideas now?" retorted Leonard. "But of course, you may be right. We're taking chances."

Five minutes later, Napoleon paused in his rowing.

"I can hear something," he muttered.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

In the Fox Film presentation of "I Loved You Wednesday" the cast selected by the studio to portray the leading roles is one of the outstanding aggregations of recent screen releases. It features Warner, Baxter, Elissa Landi, Miriam Jordan, Victor Jory and Laura Hope Crews.

The story of the film, adapted from the Broadway stage success, concerns an exotic ballet artist who becomes the world's most famous dancer. But the plot does not wholly concentrate on her success. It dramatizes her love affairs and the underlying forces that keep her from the man who adores her.

Imposed upon by a philandering dilettant of her student days, she cherishes this first romantic love as a thing of beauty. Later, when true love comes the memory of that first affair and the glamorous life she has led as a great public favourite, combine to shake her confidence in her own judgment. In a climax of tremendous sophistication and dramatic force she finds happiness with the man who loves her for what she is, rather than what she stands for.

"Fra Diavolo"

It is hard to picture the popular screen comedienne, Thelma Todd, as having once been a schoolmarm. But Miss Todd, who has the leading feminine role in the new Laurel and Hardy feature-length comedy "Fra Diavolo" opening on Friday at the Queen's Theatre, once actually taught reading, writing, and arithmetic. Now she is teaching filmgoers how to laugh.

Miss Todd was teaching school in Massachusetts when she was introduced to a Paramount "scout." She was persuaded to take a film test which turned out so successfully that she was signed to a contract immediately and enrolled in the Paramount School of Acting.

Miss Todd in private life is Mrs. Pat de Cicco. She writes poetry under an assumed name. She likes jelly beans and practical jokes but she does not like first-night openings or card tricks.

The popular comedienne lives mostly for the present, refusing to look too far ahead at what might or might not come. She has lots of friends in the film colony and is a good hostess. She loves outdoor sports, rides horseback frequently and dances a great deal.

"Bondage"

"Bondage", the new Fox drama revealing the problem of inexperienced youth in search of complete happiness, comes to the King's Theatre on Thursday.

Dorothy Jordan, one of the most beautiful of the younger film stars, and Alexander Kirkland, with a long list of screen successes to his credit, have the leading roles.

The story of "Bondage" is said to deal with a group of youngsters that one meets in the course of every day, each of them seeking the one thing that will take the loneliness out of their lives and give them the romance that is part of every youth's yearning. The paths they take and the unexpected goals they achieve are said to form a climax that is really powerful. The story traces the development of a young girl from her position of a simple shop girl to her achievement of a character that is representative of all womanhood.

Merle Tottenham, who will be remembered for her role of Annie in "Cavalcade", heads the cast in support.

Happy All Day Long

Full of activity, life and vigour, getting the fullest benefit from exercise, all children should be like this. Yet many are never really well, because they know the full happiness which springs from perfect health, simply because their parents fail to understand the causes of their unnatural weariness and lack of spirit. It is more than likely that the trouble lies in some irregularity of the digestive organs, very easy to correct if taken in time, but which may lead to serious consequences if neglected.

Wise parents safeguard their children's health by the use of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are invaluable for infants and little children in cases of intestinal derangement, constipation, indigestion, wind, colic, diarrhoea, teething troubles, colds and feverishness. Their mild purgative action assists the natural functions of the body and the child's organs are thereby kept in a healthy condition.

No household wherein there are children is complete without the world renowned remedy for children's ailments.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

of Miss Jordan and Kirkland. Others are Mydia Westman, Jane Darwell, Edward Woods, Isabel Jewell, Dorothy Lissner and Refaella Ottiano.

Alfred Santell directed "Bondage". The screen play is from the pens of Arthur Kober and Don Markey, the adaptation being made from the successful novel by Grace Sothcott Leake. Duncan Cramer is said to have provided a highly realistic setting for the film, and the musical background is something of a departure in atmospheric accompaniment.

"The Sign of the Cross"

"The Sign of the Cross" which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre, is something more than an inspiring spectacle within itself. It is proof of the fact that Cecil B. DeMille, master of this type of entertainment in the silent days, can bend sound to his will. It is further proof of the everlasting appeal of entertainment of a spectacular nature, whether the audience happens to be in Rome's Circus Maximus or in the modern motion picture theatre.

The telling of the film's strong story, moreover, has been placed in the hands of an exceptionally talented cast. Frederic March scores as the Roman patrician, Marcus Superbus, who loves a Christian girl, Elissa Landi is lovely as the Christian, Mercedes Claudette Colbert surpasses her every past performance as the wicked Empress Poppaea; Charles Laughton in no less than magnificent as Nero, and Vivian Tobin, Ian Keith, Robert Manning, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Harry Beresford, Arthur Hohl, Nat Pendleton, Clarence Dutton, Richard Alexander, William V. Mong, Tommy Conlon, Joe Bonomo and Harold Healy are excellent in supporting roles.

"The Sign of the Cross" is a great religious story, a great love story and a great spectacle. No matter what your taste in entertainment, you cannot fail to enjoy it.

PERFORMING RIGHTS

The descent upon Hongkong of the Performing Rights Society is interesting to the average person mainly as an illustration of the extent to which official control is exercised over almost every human action and impulse. It seems next to impossible these days for an individual to be responsible for any sort of action affecting a second party without the existence of a legal enactment governing it in some fashion or other. No-one can fairly cavil at the object of the Performing Rights Society; some protection for the authors of musical works is obviously necessary if they are not to end their days in poor law institutions; although some resentment may be felt at the termination of a long innings, the occasioning of trouble and inconvenience; particularly as the cost of the collection of fees—presumably the objective—is likely in a small place like Hongkong to cancel out the prospect of any worth while bounty to musical composers and authors. Such considerations will not weigh with the Society. The Colony's broadcasting service may suffer; café proprietors with loud-speaker installations may have a problem to think over; but it seems that the Colony must pay and look as pleasant as it possibly can about the payment, even while feeling doubtful whether any real benefit will accrue to anyone as a result of the innovation. The sole matter of very real concern in this situation is the future of ZBW. Its existence seems to have been the bait for the appearance of the Performing Rights Society; and the demand for royalties, added to the more easily understood refusal of the music stores to supply free record programmes indefinitely, creates difficulties not to be easily overcome. Either development would have provided sufficient cause for rumination in itself; coming together, the Broadcasting Committee may well be forgiven if it is temporarily at loss. One thing is certain: the quality and variety of programme must suffer unless a new source of revenue and fairly substantial is soon discovered. Such is the law that it is not possible for ZBW to rely on Daventry, for instance, without incurring technical responsibility for royalties as a further public performance. In

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

Most people thought Mr. Montagu Norman to be joking in his recent comment upon the shifting scenes at Washington. To-day even those on the spot find difficulty in following the movements. If the eyes are taken off the stage for as much as the proverbial minute, the picture has changed almost beyond recognition by the time a second glance is taken. Things actually accomplished are being overlooked because of the swiftness of the movement.

BANK CONTROL

Look, for example, at some of the implications behind some of the recent trends of the N.R.A. programme. President Roosevelt has authorised the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to plunge into the banking business with anything from two to four millions of money to "invest." Exactly where will the old American banking system be when efforts are made to square accounts. In addition, there are to be noted the definite support for organised labour, and the vast network of price-fixing, profit-stabilising and consumer-protecting devices which seem destined to become a permanent part of American institutions.

NOT SATISFIED

And still President Roosevelt is not satisfied. This is chiefly because human calculations of probable effects fall far short in the result mainly because they fail to take account of the human element. Advanced theories will always meet with resistance sufficient to damage if not destroy the plans of their advocates. The President is, therefore, continually forced to further experiment and is now finally committed to the Commodity Dollar. The first spectacular contribution to the thesis failed badly. It took less than a week to prove convincingly that such a revolution in the basis of currency could not be achieved without some reference to the international aspect. Another hasty jump only demonstrated that the need for re-examination still existed.

PEGGED CURRENCIES

Unsuspectingly, perhaps, a valuable contribution towards world recovery may have been made. The pegging of the dollar and the pound would be one of the best guarantees of stability in these difficult days. Senator Pittman sees in the developments the prospect of the permanent stabilisation of currencies and a return to the gold standard by all nations, and he may not be far wrong. But it will not be a return, to the gold standard as understood in pre-war days; that is easy to judge. The difficulty is to foresee in exactly what final form an internationally accepted monetary standard will emerge from the present chaos.

PANNED ECONOMY

M. Sarraut's address to the French Chamber on Friday should be more than normally interesting. Such hints as have been given of his Cabinet's programme suggest that France is likely to draw more than ever economically within itself and that economic isolation will become as marked a feature of general policy as it is in the United States. Planned economy, unfortunately, means little more than this since the failure of the World Economic Conference. In a planned world economy, obviously, it would mean precisely the contrary.

short, it looks very much as though ZBW has perforce to begin all over again, from an entirely new starting-point, to tackle old problems afresh from a new angle.

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

By REGINALD POUND

NEURASTHENIA . . . nervous . . . psychasthenia . . . hypochondria . . . like a dreadful discord of clanking chains these names occur with dismal frequency in the grand crescendo of modern life.

Foreshortened into "nerves," they become the password that ushers an over-lengthening procession of distrust human beings through consulting-rooms, nursing-homes, hospitals, health clinics, confessionals, divorce courts.

Nerves . . . nerves . . . nerves . . . the disease of our age; the curse that civilisation has put on the brow of wilful man; the heaviest, the costliest social burden of the lot.

Among the flagrantly many national secrets that no census has ever revealed is the number of people for whom the sun is always partly in eclipse, for whom existence is one long wrestling-match with dark powers in little Gethsemanes of their own.

What is the story behind the mounting graph of nervous illness? When the case-books of the twentieth century are dug up from the ruins of Harley-street a thousand years on, what will they disclose to the peering, attentive professors of that time?

What subtle disharmonies in the soul of man, circa 1933, will they reveal?

The medical historians of the future will probably note with interest the recurrence of certain catchwords taken from our current neuropathy. Yesterday it was "inferiority complex." To-day it is "conflict." To-morrow a new one may be lifted from the Italian-studded dictionaries of psychology: Schizophrenia.

I had not heard it until a day or two ago I went among the medical magi as a preliminary to this brief and no doubt daringly inexact survey of the flowing tide of psychic unhappiness.

I gathered that it denotes a state of mind formerly labelled even less prettily. I also gathered that the ranks of the schizophrenes are now scores deep, comprising a pallid, tight-lipped army, chanting as its marching song an adaptation from Wordsworth: "The world is too much for us."

For there you have (I discovered) the source of a vast deal of nerve misery—the basic disinclination of the individual to face reality and his failure to indulge in the nimble acrobatic feats that enable others to skip over or dodge round the rocks, pot-holes, and what not that beset man's road down the ages.

Too much petting and fussing over when young . . . instincts at war with society . . . unsympathetic handling in adolescence . . . certain of the more violent kinds of religious influence . . . lack of self-discipline . . . all these, I found, are down in the physicians' black-list as making for much subsequent suffering under the heading of "nerves."

Given these conditions, or some of them, together with various factors of ill-health, and you are a fairly sure candidate for the grey brotherhood of the nerve-wrecked and the desperately sick of soul.

My talks with the doctors showed that at the back of any number of serious nerve disturbances are fears as numerous as they are groundless . . . ridiculous fears . . . chimeras belonging to the dim terrain of childhood before reason began to exert its dominion over the growing mind.

Fear is the dynamic force behind a huge number of nerve cases, I was told. It zigzags through human society like black lightning, unseen but enormously powerful, paralysing the health, the happiness, the efficiency of millions.

It sets the mob howling. It drives men to drink, women to drugs, breaks up homes . . . fear, the psychic action; that so many mistake for hard fact; the long shadow that, illogically, is always there.

The doctors declared that any number of nervous breakdowns have their origin simply in broken rules of sensible living—not enough good quality sleep ("Balm of Gilead" . . . chief nourisher in life's feast); dietary ignorance and abuse, over-indulgence; neglect of the prime virtues of fresh air and exercise; over-work with this last not nearly so high in the list as is commonly supposed.

The penalty of any of these obvious sins can be severe; and many there be that have paid it.

Each of the authorities I talked with had his own theory, his own path of research; each said that there is still a great deal about "nerves" that cannot at present be adequately explained.

But, thinking back over my talks with them, I recall that there seemed to be a general note of agreement on what is psychologically known as man's will to power—that over-ruling passion to outshine one's fellows, which, in extremes, peoples the wards of mental hospitals with pathetically comic Napoleons and Queen Victorias.

We all want to be what we are not; the damage is done when we aspire—and perspire—to be what we never can be.

There is the artist who day-dreams that he is a genius, when he is simply a good craftsman; the singer who cannot understand why she is no prima donna; the humbly born wife who longs to be "a lady"; the inept politician who is crazy to be a leader.

To all these, and many others, the shock of finding that the cup of life is well and truly running over with disappointment often supplies the last kick that sends them into the fantastic world of dreams where they can indulge, unchecked, their fatuous longing for majesty, dominion, and power.

Are the doctors (you ask) declaring war, then, on ambition?

The Very Idea!

IT'S CHESS TOO BAD

WE notice that, now that winter is coming, the Hongkong Chess Club is getting out its boards and blowing the dust off its pawns.

Chess is a game for brilliant minds; we do not like it. It goes back to medieval days, when they had knights and things like that, and our only regret is that it didn't stay there.

Chess pieces consist of sixteen pieces, of which a vast majority are pawns. Pawns cannot do anything except get in the way of your own pieces, making them very valuable to the opponent until he has captured them.

The queen is the big shot in chess, being much more powerful than the king; just as in real life. A queen can move all over the board without warning, and usually does. The object of the game is to capture the king and finish the fracas in time for a late dinner. Beginners at chess are inclined to be impatient and take only fifteen minutes to think up a move. You can't get anywhere by rushing through like that.

Good chess players are named Castles and things like that. They come from the Balkans and open the game with the Queen's Gambit Declined. This is a variation of the Av Boon play with the castles shifting instead of the end. We do not know why they always decline this, but they do. We go to them one better by declining to play at all.

You ought to know something about the other pieces. Like the bishops, for instance. The bishops are nondescript-looking things which move cat-in-the-hat. They cannot go by a red light. The castles, on the other hand, move sideways, which is very illogical. The knights are called knights because they look like horses and are even crazier in their movements than real ones. They go two squares in one direction and one in another or vice versa, not having sense enough to cut across and conserve their energy.

There is great intellectual diversion to be derived from chess. We are sure of this, because it gives us a headache. There is nothing like intellectual diversion.

An argument in favour of the game is that the pieces make lovely playthings for the baby.

FREE RECORDS

We notice in a morning newspaper that the radio columnist is appealing for gramophone records for ZBW. We are prepared to donate him several.

Let's see, now. He can have "P-e-e-e-zo, Mr. Hemingway," "Pink Elephants," "She Was Only Somebody's Daughter," "My Boop-oop-a-doop Doesn't Mean Boop-oop-a-doop" and "Here Lies Love." Yes, and we'll also throw in "Stormy Weather" for good measure.

They all belong to our neighbour.

VICE VERSA

Speaking of records, one of our favourites is "The Voice in the Old Village Choir." And speaking of vices reminds us of an experience we had at Home once.

In case you don't know it we were a bit of an amateur carpenter in our quiet way. Nothing much, you know, only when it came to knocking down the old fowl house and building a new one, we had the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank contractors licked to a frazzle. We may have occasionally dropped a hammer on somebody's head, but we didn't drop five-ton lumps of masonry.

We were cured of carpentering when we went into a hardware shop one day, and approached the lady behind the counter.

"Have you any vices?" we asked her confidentially.

We have often wondered why she slapped our faces.

HOLLYWOODN'T

Things are so bad in Hollywood that one girl has had to part with her wedding rings.

A MAX FACTORY

We are told that women used to paint their faces in the Middle Ages. They still paint their faces in the middle ages.

"I hope you're satisfied! Killin' off all the wild animal life."

WIRELESS TO CURE DISEASES

BY ULTRA-SHORT WAVE

ANOTHER GREAT DISCOVERY

London. The use of ultra-short wireless waves for the cure of severe internal complaints is advanced by a German scientist, Dr. Erwin Schliephake, in the latest issue of the "British Journal of Physical Medicine."

The doctor reports the cure of complaints such as internal abscesses, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and simple headache, all without operation. The primary wave is generated by an emitter designed like a broadcast set and in making use of ultra-short waves he found that large carbuncles healed in from 10 to 20 days after 8 to 15 days treatment.

"In most cases the pain and feeling of tension subside after the first treatment," he states. "The absence of pain is particularly appreciated by all patients because the affected part is not nearly as seriously incapacitated as by the usual surgical or conservative treatment."

"In true migraine (special type of headache) ultra-short wave treatment of the head affected rapid improvement and cure. These treatments are much more pleasant and less strenuous in these cases than present methods, a daily treatment of the head only requires half-an-hour a day, and is very agreeable to the patient."

The "British Journal of Physical Medicine," commenting on this, states it has been found that the ultra-short waves pass most freely through the tissues which have the smallest capacity resistance, and they traverse fat, brain tissue and bone without difficulty.—Reuter.

HINKLER'S RESTING PLACE

TO REMAIN IN ITALY

DECIDES WIFE

Sydney. "Mrs. Hinkler and I have come to the conclusion, after consulting with our lawyers and considering the lapse of time since Bert's death, that it will be better to leave him in Italy, especially in view of the splendid memorial which the Italian people have provided for him."

This statement was made by Mrs. H. A. Hinkler, mother of the late Squadron-Leader Bert Hinkler, who returned to Brisbane after having spent a six months' holiday in Western Australia.

Mrs. Hinkler declined to discuss the question of whether her son's body should be given a last resting place in Brisbane, as the Premier (Mr. W. F. Smith) had suggested, or in Bundaberg, in accordance with the wishes of the friends of Bert Hinkler in his native town. She said that the delay in settling this question was in some measure due to the law in Italy, which prohibited the removal of her son's remains until six months after his burial.

Mrs. Hinkler said that the widow of the airman had settled in Southampton with her people, and was not likely to return to Australia during the lifetime of her mother. She had abandoned all plans to take up aviation, which she was considering when the airman was alive.—Reuter.

TWO HUNTERS KILL 130 ELEPHANTS

Value of Tusks Cover Expedition Costs

Bulawayo. Two hunters, Messrs. Hall and Rangley, engaged by the Northern Rhodesian Government in connection with the protection of native gardens and the reduction of the number of elephants in the northern portion of the territory, have accounted for more than 130 elephants. Among those shot was one with 10lb tusks, which but for being damaged at the tips, would have touched the 100lb mark. While a number of tusks-less elephants were among the bag, the accrual of ivory to the Government should well cover the cost of the expedition.—Reuter.

PEACE ACT AS EXAMPLE TO WORLD

MR. HENDERSON'S SUGGESTION

Mr. Arthur Henderson, President of the Disarmament Conference, speaking at the Labour Conference at Hastings said that millions of the common people, whom they represented, had shown a determination that, so far as lay in their power, there should be no more war.

It was a dedication, a solemn vow, pledging them to the work of peace.

It was a formal break with the old traditions, with the blind loyalties that had made the workers the victim of war.

This new spirit, this willingness to dare and to risk all things in the cause of peace was, he was convinced, the beginning of wisdom and the best guarantee of victory in the battle for a secure peace.

INTERNATIONAL SOLIDARITY. This new and wider spirit led first of all to the recognition that to have peace we must look beyond the boundaries of our own country.

We must make a living reality of the international solidarity of the workers.

FATE OF CIVILISATION.

We must also welcome as allies all in every country who would join us in the struggle for peace on which the fate of civilisation depended.

The Labour and Socialist movement was international to the core. It was against national and racial as well as class barriers.

It stood for economic organisation, social justice and freedom, not only in one country, but throughout the world.

It recognised that international anarchy was as much the enemy of Socialism as was economic anarchy.

TREMENDOUS TASK.

If it abandoned its international faith it would be powerless to save the world from another war and from the dictatorships and the awful tyrannies which were the consequences of the war.

It was a tremendous task. To have peace we must not only sign treaties removing the right to resort to war, but we must abolish the national equipment and institutions that made war possible and the private interests that lived by war.

We just destroy the narrow loyalties and fanatisms that made men ready for war, and replace them by a living, creative faith in the work of peace. That was a big task.

AMERICA AND RUSSIA.

When they came to the international side of their task of organising peace they found there was one political instrument—and only one—the League of Nations.

The most urgent need was to bring two great Powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, into partnership in the task of organising peace.

Considerable progress had already been made in this direction. He believed it would be possible to get these two countries into some system of world-wide consultation through the League on all matters affecting world peace.

ROAD THROUGH GENEVA.

He was convinced that it would be impossible, even if it were desirable, for this country under any Government to achieve an exclusive alliance with either of these great countries.

The road both to Washington and Moscow lay through Geneva and through world action for constructive peace.

What the world needed to-day was an assurance that when it came to the point the world's peace system would be used.

The treaties guaranteeing peace must be honoured and not regarded as scraps of paper.

He suggested that the British Parliament should pass a Peace Act which would provide that in all cases the Government would submit its international disputes to one of the methods of peaceful settlement.

This Peace Act would not be an empty gesture, since the example would in all probability be followed by other nations.

The whole course of the discussions at Geneva revealed the necessity, now universally recognised, of making each country's armaments a matter of concern to all countries.

INTERNATIONAL TREATY.

To give effect to that principle the amount of other countries' armaments must be fixed in an international treaty.

The execution of that treaty must be placed under the supervision of an international commission.

On that commission Russia and the United States were to be represented.

It would have the duty of investigating and publicly reporting on the state of each country's armament and war industries.

DELAY AND DIFFICULTIES.

The Conference would realise why he could not say all he would like to say on the topic of disarmament.

They would believe him when he told them that he fully shared their impatience at the slowness of the proceedings, at the interminable delay, and the difficulties that had been met.

At the present moment the position might not look too hopeful, but at least it was becoming clear.

We had come face to face with the fundamental political issue, how to reconcile Germany's desire for equality with France's anxiety about security, and the whole world's need for peace.

STORM OF REACTION.

It was clear to all that to-day a storm of reaction was blowing through the world.

On the wings of the storm, like an evil odour from the battlefields, had come a revival of the base and senseless creed of dictatorship, the belief in despotism and international anarchy that brought the world to the catastrophe of 1914.

Never would Labour succumb to that creed. Never would it abandon hope or give up the fight for peace.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE.

TWO MEN COMMITTED TO THE NEXT SESSIONS

Before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, two men, Tan Wai-tai and Liu Chun, who appeared on a charge of manslaughter as a result of a street fight in the Hungshom district on September 20, were committed for trial at the next Criminal Sessions.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, appeared for the prosecution, while Mr. P. H. Sin acted on behalf of defendants. Detective Inspector Chester Woods is in charge of investigations.

It is alleged that on the night in question the second accused, who lives in Ha Heung Street, alleged he saw a man stealing two roots from a garden nearby. He raised the alarm and several men set upon the alleged culprit. Four men made the attack, and it is alleged that the first and second defendants were two of them. The first defendant was stated to have used an iron drill, while the second used his fists in the assault.

At yesterday's hearing, Dr. J. B. Mackie, medical officer at Kowloon Hospital, appeared in the box for cross-examination by Mr. Sin. At a previous hearing, Dr. Mackie said he had conducted a post-mortem on the body of an unknown Chinese male on September 21. The body was identified by P. C. 364 who had picked the man up in the street the night before, and by Inspector Langley, in charge of Hungshom. Externally there were several bruises on the chest, and internally the spleen was ruptured. Death was caused by a ruptured spleen and internal hemorrhage.

Doctor Cross-Examined.

Dr. Mackie admitted that deceased had a diseased spleen and that when the spleen was ruptured internal hemorrhage would ensue, and death would follow in less than five minutes. He also admitted that if a person had a diseased spleen and knocked against the corner of a table it might cause a rupture. In such a case, it would be difficult for the person to get up after the accident.

Tsang Sang, friend of Wang Po, a witness at a previous hearing, gave evidence that at a certain time he had heard Wang Po discussing the alleged assault with another man, Shek Choi. They had been heard to say that the assault was "unfair." This was in a cross-examination, admitted that he had been paid 50 cents by the police for two money, and that he had tried to get news of the assault for the police.

Mr. Sin, in submitting his case, said: "I have no case to answer. After examining the previous evidence with great care, I find that Wang Po and Shek Choi have come to this Court and, under oath, said they saw the defendants participating in the fight in Ha Heung Street. Their first evidence seems to corroborate in every particular, but when we come to examine the cross-examination we find they differ. Their evidence is so contradictory that no Court could rely on it to convict and no jury would convict of evidence of this nature."

Mr. Sin said his defence was that neither of his men was on the spot and the deceased might have been injured by a fall rather than a blow.

Before committing defendants to the next Criminal Sessions, Mr. Butters said: "The case for the prosecution rests on the evidence of Shek Choi and Wang Po, but in this case of preliminary prosecution, there is only a prima facie case to be put forward. I think this is a case for a jury to decide on the evidence."

Mr. Sin reserved his defence.

FINANCE OFFICERS RESIGNING

EX-MINISTER TALKS TO BANKERS

Nanking, Oct. 31. After the resignation of Mr. T. V. Soong, the Political Vice-Minister of Finance, Mr. Chow Lin, the Administrative Vice-Minister of Finance, Mr. Li Tiu-sang, two of Mr. Soong's most able subordinates, tendered their resignations from the Finance Ministry this morning. Other secretaries of the Ministry and important officials administering offices under the Finance Ministry either in Nanking or Shanghai are also expected to resign.

The out-going officers under Mr. Soong were busy the whole morning winding up the affairs of the Ministry and all accounts and payments to the railways and other Nanking departments were cleared up to the end of October. The successor of Mr. Soong, Mr. H. H. Kung, is not expected in Nanking until the week-end, although he announced previously that he would assume his new duties tomorrow morning. Because of the Chinese bankers' panic in Shanghai, Mr. Kung has extended his stay there to conclude negotiations with the leading foreign and Chinese bankers. Mr. Kung's discussions with the Shanghai financiers are known to have been highly satisfactory.

Another Conference.

Mr. Kung had another conference with Mr. Soong this morning at the latter's Shanghai residence. The two Ministers discussed the Government's financial problems and the government bond situation for over an hour. Mr. Kung returned to his work at the Central Bank in the afternoon.

Mr. Soong gave a reception to the leading Chinese bankers and merchants this afternoon, in which the retiring Finance Minister expressed his heart-felt appreciation of the merchants' strong petition to the Government asking for reconsideration of his resignation. Mr. Soong assured the merchants that a financial crisis could undoubtedly be averted because of the able manner in which his successor was expected to carry on the work in Nanking.

The President of the Executive Yuan, Mr. Wang Ching-wei, has arrived in Shanghai to see Mr. Soong. Rumours are current of impending changes in the Executive Yuan, because of Mr. Soong's retirement. Some circles believe that Mr. Wang is also very pessimistic over the Nanking outlook.

This morning's meeting of the Economic Council was not held because of the absence in Nanking of Mr. Soong and Mr. Wang Ching-wei, the two leading members.—Wah Kiu Yat Po.

Mr. Wang's Statement.

Shanghai, Oct. 31. Mr. Wang Ching-wei, who has been visiting Mr. T. V. Soong for the purpose of influencing the former Finance Minister to remain a member of the Economic Council, has slipped in the bud the rumour that he, too, was contemplating resigning.

He made a formal statement denying such an intention, when interviewed to-day, just before leaving for Nanking with Mr. H. H. Kung.

Mr. Wang emphasised that Mr. T. V. Soong's resignation was entirely due to financial reasons. He denied that China is preparing for direct negotiations with Japan and stressed that recognition of Manchukuo is impossible.

Continuing, Mr. Wang said that Dr. Lo Wen-kan is due in Tientsin on November 3 and will immediately proceed to Nanking. It has not been decided, he stated, whether Dr. Lo will resume his post as Foreign Minister.

Mr. Wang expressed confidence in Mr. Kung's ability to cope with the financial situation. Although military expenses would be cut down generally, this would not apply to the anti-Communist campaign now being conducted by General Chiang Kai-shek in Kiangsi. Referring to the American wheat and cotton loan to China, Mr. Wang said that demands from the Provinces for aid amounted to six times the total of the loan itself.—Reuter.

Y.M.C.A. FAIL TO KEEP IT GOING

HONGKONG LADIES GIVEN A FRIGHT

The Y.M.C.A. first eleven suffered another reverse when they were defeated by the odd goal in five by the Club do Recreio in a friendly hockey match played at King's Park yesterday afternoon. Play on the whole, was of an average standard there being no brilliant individual performances.

The Y took the lead within the first few minutes of the commencement of play, R. Baldwin finding the net as the result of a solo burst through. The Recreio retaliated, W. Reed, at centre-half, playing a clever game, while A. M. Xavier led the forward line well. They continued to attack, but Botoho kept them at bay. S. Forster, on the right wing, got going and from his pass, G. Christie missed a shot, but W. J. Brown connected the shot to give them the lead. Before the interval C. Roza Pereira noticed the Recreio's second goal.

On resumption after the breather, the Recreio forwards combined well, C. Roza Pereira finding the net to give them the lead. Shields, the 'Y' custodian, was inclined to come out too far from his goal when meeting an attacking forward. A ding-dong struggle ensued, Baldwin putting in some good work on the left wing. Try as they did the 'Y' could not find the net. G. P. Lammert was a notable absentee from their forward line.

LINCOLNS WIN.

Meeting the South Wales Borderers on the U.S.R.C. ground yesterday afternoon, the Lincolnshire Regiment emerged winners by the odd goal in three in a thrilling contest.

MATCH CANCELLED.

The friendly fixture between the Central British Association and the Royal Engineers which was to have been played at Soekunpo yesterday, was cancelled. The C.B.A. are meeting the Hongkong Hockey Club seniors at King's Park this afternoon, and a fast game is expected.

CLOSE THING FOR HK. LADIES

St. Andrew's Give Good Display

St. Andrew's Ladies extended the Caer Clark Cup holders in a friendly game on the Marina ground yesterday, and the result, two goals to one in favour of the Hongkong Ladies, was a fair indication of the run of play.

The Saints played a three full back game, disposing the services of a goal keeper, and this proved an asset in breaking up their opponents' run. E. Bonner lead the Hongkong Ladies' attack and was a great improvement on last year. She was ably supported on either side by B. Liang and J. Dalziel. E. Selby on the left wing was responsible for the only goal netted in the first half. On the opposite wing E. Bell played a hard game but the pass sent out to her from the centre were often badly placed and too far ahead. D. Robertson played a useful game at centre half and had as supporters H. K. Lowe on the right and B. Hance on the left. M. Wallace played a brilliant game at left back. She is steady and has a fine clearing hit. M. Bird was between the sticks but had little to do. M. Woolley was the pick of the St. Andrew's side. She ranks among

Put Pebeco—half an inch or so—on your tooth brush when you clean your teeth. Notice how it stimulates the glands, you feel the cleansing moisture rushing into every crevice, washing away every lurking food remnant, and purifying the whole mouth. Your teeth are actually bathing in a cleansing, germ-destroying flow.

Rinse and gargle mouth and throat, and you will have a feeling of mouth cleanliness and freshness never before experienced. The salty, invigorating flavour of Pebeco is proof of its medical value.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

"We're near the shallows now.
We've got to go slow."
"You mean, we've got to wriggle our way through rocks and things?"

"Yes. But we'll be all right.
See that long white line?"
Napoleon turned his head, and looked.

"We want to avoid that, don't we?" he observed, speculatively.
"We do. But I'm not sorry to see it. I recognise that beggar, and it gives me my bearing again.
But I've got to use my light now
—it's a nuisance."

"They'll spot us, then, for certain!"

"Not if they're below, old chap.
There's a chance of that."

"Yes, but s'pose they do spot us?"

"Well, maybe we'll spot them, too."

"I see. That'll be jolly."
"Cheer up," remarked Leonard, bending forward and patting his companion's knee. "After all, it's not likely they'll try to murder us!"

Napoleon swallowed.
"You know, you're so comforting," he said. "I think I'd like to live with you for ever. May I call you Leonard?"

He resumed his rowing. His strokes were careful and slow. A minute later, there was another pause, while they tied handkerchiefs round the oars where they met the rowlocks. This appreciably muffled the sound of their approach, which was further deflected by the dull roar and splash of the breaking waves.

Leonard recognised a big, oddlyshaped rock, and found it another useful direction post. Once or twice, their boat scraped against submerged ledges, but the smoothness of the water where there were no breakers, and the slowness of their pace, rendered a catastrophe unlikely.

Now the breakers seemed to be all around them. Some were close, others distant. Napoleon drew a big breath, and kept his head.

He stopped making mistakes.
He answered Leonard's whispered directions unerringly, through necessity rather than skill, with a quicker sensation that he was up against a spiritual wall of darkness. What lay on the other side of that wall?

What events? What emotions? What ultimate results? He longed for this nerve-racking trip to end, and his familiar desire to shout gripped him. But he resisted it, just as a man who is unused to heights has to resist the temptation to throw himself over.

All at once he paused, and took a quick glance over his shoulder.

"Funny thing," he muttered.
"There's breakers all about, but none ahead of us."

"Yes, there are, old chap, but you can't see them," replied Leonard. "That's the side of the ship you're staring at."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Today's Contract Problem

How would you, as South, arrive at a small slam contract with the following hand, when you open with one heart and West overcalls with one spade? How would you play the hand if West's opening lead is the deuce of diamonds? Here's a tip—West has the singleton 'queen' of hearts.

North: ♠ None ♥ K 7 4
♦ Q 8 4 ♣ K J 9
East: Blind.
South: ♠ A J 9 8 ♣ A J 10
♦ A 10 ♠ None
West: Blind.
Solution in next issue.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

The opening lead by the defence presents a clue to the solution of the last problem. Often this lead locates the only important card the declarer wants to place. That's enough to plan the proper attack for game.

The hand presented here was played by Miss Elinor Murdoch, runner-up to Mr. David Burnstone, who won the National Masters' Individual Contract Championship in New York recently.

The Bidding
The bidding was South one heart, West pass, North one spade, East pass. South two hearts, West pass, North bid four hearts and Miss Murdoch in the South passed.

The Play
West's opening lead was the king of clubs, which Miss Murdoch won with the ace. The opening lead showed West with the queen of clubs and this was the important card.

Miss Murdoch now played the ace and king of hearts, picking up the outstanding trump. She could see that she must lose one club—her problem was to keep from losing three diamonds.

She cashed the ace and king of spades in dummy, led a small spade and trumped in her own hand. She then led a heart, winning in dummy with the queen, and then led the last spade from dummy, trumping in her own hand.

Her next play was a small club which she knew West must win with the queen. West was helpless—if he led a club, Miss Murdoch would ruff in one hand and discard a diamond from the other, thereby losing only two diamonds.

While if he cashed his ace of diamonds, this would permit her

ROTARIAN TIFFIN

H.K. MEMBERS MEET ON PRESIDENT HOOVER

Hongkong Rotarians had a treat yesterday when they were invited to tiffin aboard the s.s. President Hoover by their president, Rotarian T. B. Wilson.

Welcoming the members and guests on behalf of Capt. E. Anderson and himself, Mr. Wilson said the Captain regretted his inability to be present as he had been detained ashore.

Dean Swann, who has recently returned from leave, was welcomed back by the president, and in reply stated he was very glad to be back. He remarked that during his travels he had not been in any place where Rotary met and had thus been unable to make use of his international ticket.

The following guests were introduced and welcomed.—Rotarians James M. Henry, A. E. Quin, R. H. Gorman, J. M. X. Chollet, S. F. Chien, Geo. Burdick, J. B. Harrison and Dr. Tennyson Howie (all of Canton), O. Stapleton Cotton (president, Tientsin Rotary), T. W. Southam (Amoy Rotary), Mr. D. S. Wylie (Toronto), Eng. Cmdr. R. P. Ninnis, Rev. R. F. Lankaster (Yunnanfu), Messrs. F. A. Perry, J. W. Platt, C. L. Shank, P. D. Newman and F. G. Maund.

Greetings From Other Clubs.

Rotarian Stapleton Cotton said that twenty months ago he came through Hongkong knowing nothing of Rotary. He thought it was a back-slapping and hymn-singing body. But when he went to Tientsin he was enlightened, and shortly after joining complained about the show and was put in charge of the tiffin arrangements. Tientsin was the second oldest Rotary club in China, now being in its eleventh year, and he brought to the Hongkong Rotarians the best wishes of that northern club and hoped they would make a point of joining the Tientsin members at tiffin whenever possible. Rotarian Southam, who is a member of the Amoy Rotary Club, the youngest such club in China, brought greetings from Amoy, and stated that their membership was now about thirty, of which half were Chinese and the remainder of other nationalities.

Rev. Mr. Lankaster said that after spending five years in the interior of China as he had done, to come to Hongkong was like getting back to England.

Rotary and Peace.

The President regretted the impending departure for Shanghai of Rotarian Gerondal. Mr. Gerondal, he said headed the attendance list, and the club would miss him during his absence.

Mr. Gerondal said he was sorry he had to leave. His stay in Hongkong had been most happy, and he had looked forward to remaining here longer. He had no doubt that the Hongkong club would be able to do a lot of good work, and he made the suggestion that the club consider whether or not it would be possible to do anything to prevent war or make for better understanding. He had read an interesting editorial in the Hongkong Telegraph the previous day which applied to Rotary Clubs all over the world, especially to Hongkong and Shanghai. A paragraph in the editorial read, "More than ever must all men of good will work to fortify the institutions of peace. They must within their own countries and outside of them, band themselves together to declare that they will take no step which will lead to war, and will take many steps which will lead to peace." Towards this end he thought Rotary could do a great deal.

The president was thanked for the invitation he had extended to members, on the motion of Dean Swann.

CHINA LOTTERY

FIRST PRIZE TICKET NOT SOLD

Shanghai, Oct. 31. Before an immense crowd at the Candrome, the drawing of the second China National State Lottery took place to-day.

Ticket Number 485,828 drew the first prize, but it was found to be unsold and a special drawing was made later to decide the destination of the half million dollars.

The figure will stand to determine the winners of "terminal prizes" (holders of tickets with numbers ending in 23).

The second prizes, each worth $100,000, will go to those holding tickets with the numbers 074,710 and 131,674.

As a result of the special drawing, Ticket Number 289,770 won first prize in the Lottery.—Routier.

JEWISH REFUGEES.

LONDON CONFERENCE TO ENLIST AID

London, Oct. 31. A Jewish conference, now being held in London, and attended by one hundred delegates from forty-five countries, including America, is planning to appeal to the world of Jewry for two million pounds sterling to assist Jewish refugees from Germany to settle elsewhere.

A Central World Council will be formed to issue the appeal and administer the funds collected, and will co-operate with Mr. James MacDonald, the High Commissioner recently appointed by the League of Nations to assist the refugees from Germany.

It is reported that the Cyprus Government has tentatively agreed to settle 50,000 Jewish refugees.—Routier.

HARBIN FRICTION

THE SOVIET AND MANCHUKUO

MORE VIGOROUS PROTESTS

Harbin, Nov. 1.

Further friction between the Soviet and Manchukuo has developed from the recent arrest of three Soviet citizens, including a soldier, on an island in the Amur River.

The island is in the river about forty miles from Aigun and a dispute has arisen regarding its ownership.

A vigorous exchange of protests and counter-protests has resulted from the incident.

The Manchukuo authorities claim that they were within their rights in arresting the men, as the island is in Manchukuo territory, but the Soviet also claims ownership.

"LAUGHABLE"

Shih Liu-pen called yesterday upon Mr. Slavutsky, the Soviet Consul-General in Harbin, who informed him that the contention that Manchukuo's sovereign rights had been violated was laughable.

Shih Liu-pen said the men might be released if the Soviet acknowledged Manchukuo's rights in the island.

M. SLAVUTSKY'S DEMAND.

M. Slavutsky responded by again demanding the release of the arrested men and of the Chinese Eastern Railway officials who are still in custody.

He also alleged the ill-treatment of Soviet prisoners by the White Russians employed in the Manchukuo Police Force.

Shih Liu-pen declared that the release of the men could not be effected as all the arrested were guilty of criminal offences.—Reuter.

YACHT ADVENTURE

WAR HERO'S LONE VOYAGE

ACROSS ATLANTIC FROM ENGLAND

London, Oct. 31.

An adventurous single-handed yachting trip across the Atlantic was brought to a triumphant conclusion to-day when Group Captain L.W.B. Rees, V.C., O.B.E., M.C., A.F.C., arrived at Nassau, in the Bahamas.

Group Captain Rees set out from Falmouth about three months ago on his long lone voyage in an eight-ton yacht, crossing the Atlantic, via the Azores.

The trip from the Azores to the Bahamas took sixty-four days, the ex-R.A.F. officer experiencing all sorts of weather, but coming through unscathed.

A.D.C. TO THE KING.

Captain Rees was placed on the retired list two years ago after serving as A.D.C. to His Majesty the King for six years.

He won the Victoria Cross in France in 1918, by attacking single-handed, ten enemy planes, bringing down two and continuing the fight although severely wounded until the other eight machines had been scattered.—British Wireless.

QUEEN'S LOSS

DEATH OF HER COUSIN

SIR AUGUSTUS FITZGEORGE

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Oct. 31.
The death has occurred, at the age of 86, of Colonel Sir Augustus Charles Frederick FitzGeorge, cousin to Her Majesty the Queen. The third son of His Royal Highness the late Duke of Cambridge and Mrs. FitzGeorge, Sir Augustus, after training at Sandhurst joined the 1st Rifle Brigade in Canada in 1866. He was A.D.C. to Lord Napier of Magdala in India from 1870 to 1876, and acted in a like capacity to the Prince of Wales on his Indian tour in 1876-8.

In 1878 he was transferred to the 11th Hussars, and from 1884 to 1886 was extra A.D.C. to Sir A. Alison at Aldershot.

From 1886 to 1895 he was private secretary and equerry to H.R.H. Duke of Cambridge.

He was created K.C.V.O. in 1904, and was subsequently raised to C.B.

DISQUIET IN AMERICA

FIVE IMPORTANT NRA RESIGNATIONS

REPUBLICAN ATTACK

Washington, Nov. 1.

Further steps in the President's gold policy are being anxiously awaited.

Well-informed quarters state that if this final attempt by President Roosevelt to raise commodity prices by gold manipulation fails, some form of direct inflation will be adopted.

Such inflation once authorized might easily go to the extent authorized by the amendment to the Recovery Act empowering the President to reduce the gold content of the dollar up to fifty per cent. of its present legal content.

BIMETALLISM.

It is suggested that this might be accompanied by some measure of bimetallism.

In the meantime, the Administration is awaiting word from Great Britain on its gold purchase plans before any purchases are made abroad.

"One consequence of the gold programme has been a flood of spurious gold mining shares.

TRUCE BROKEN.

The political "truce" which has prevailed since President Roosevelt assumed office, was broken to-day, by the Republican National Committee, which issued a statement charging President Roosevelt with violating many of his election pledges, including those relating to:

- (a) sound money
- (b) the international monetary conference
- (c) a balanced budget
- (d) a reduction in federal expenditure.

N.R.A. RESIGNATIONS.

Five prominent industrialists have resigned from the National Recovery Administration, ostensibly in conformity with a rotation plan.

Among those who have resigned was Mr. Walter C. Teagle, the President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.—Reuter.

COUPON TRADING TO CEASE

U.K. MAKERS' DECISION

London, Oct. 31.

It is announced that the tobacco traders in the United Kingdom will cease what is known as coupon-trading at the end of this year.

The system has proved very costly and a meeting was held to-day of the Tobacco Trade Association, at which it was decided that coupons, certificates, vouchers or similar things issued with cigarettes and having an exchangeable value will only be issued by the manufacturers up to December 31.

It will be possible for holders to redeem outstanding coupons up to the end of February, but after that date, they will become null and void.—Reuter.

BIG BUSINESS METHODS

MR. WIGGIN'S DISCLOSURES

A TAX-DODGING DEVICE

Washington, Oct. 31.

Further striking disclosures concerning Big Business methods in the United States were revealed by Mr. Albert Wiggin, ex-President of the Chase Bank, giving evidence before the Banking Investigation Committee of the Senate.

The formation of a series of corporations with the object of escaping taxes was the most important revelation.

He said that the Directors of these corporations included Mr. Gates McGurrah, the President of the Bank of International Settlements.

Mr. Wiggin asserted that the corporations made a profit of ten million dollars in a period of five years, but lost five millions from their participation in pools and syndicates with the Chase Securities Corporation.—Reuter.

WILD LIFE IN AFRICA

CONVENTION FOR PROTECTION

London, Oct. 31.

Fourteen countries were represented at the International Conference which opened at the House of Lords in London to-day to consider means of preserving and protecting the flora and fauna of Africa.

Lord Plymouth, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies, in welcoming the delegates, emphasised the need for new methods to control the indiscriminate destruction of wild life.

The British Government felt the problem was urgent and that the work of the Conference might well afford a basis for the protection of nature in other parts of the world.

Lord Onslow, who presided over the conference, recalled some of the articles in a draft convention prepared by the British Government with special reference to the constitution of national parks and reserves.

A general discussion followed and the conference will resume to-morrow.—British Wireless.

LOCAL WEDDING

MR. W. O'NEIL AND MISS KIRKBRIDE

St. Joseph's Church, Garden Road, was the scene of a pretty wedding this morning, when Miss Margaret Kirkbride, younger daughter of the late Mr. Charles Kirkbride and Mrs. Anna Kirkbride, of Liverpool, became the bride of Mr. William O'Neil son of Mr. and Mrs. David O'Neil, of Limerick.

The Rev. Father Riganti solemnised the marriage.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. D. J. Mackie, of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, wore a charming dress of eau de nil, with bouquet on shoulder. She was attended by Miss Frances Kelly, of Shanghai. Mr. H. Duncan was the best man.

After the wedding a reception, attended by intimate friends of the bride and groom, was held in the Jacobean Room of the Hongkong Hotel.

The honeymoon is being spent at Repulse Bay.

Mr. O'Neil is the local manager of Reuters Limited.

MAINTENANCE SUMMONS

AGAINST WEALTHY CHINESE

ORDER FOR $150 A MONTH

A maintenance summons against Lo Shun-wan, described as being of independent means, by Tong Wai-yin, his kit-fat wife, before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, was successful.

The Magistrate made an order for defendant to pay $150 a month to be reckoned as from May last, and costs to the amount of $100.

Mr. H. L. Denny, appearing for complainant, said that defendant was the third son of the late Mr. Lo Koon-ting, who was very well known in Hongkong. Defendant was married to complainant, but had apparently dissipated his assets and took a concubine. The house in which his wife was living, at No. 3, Saigon Street, ground floor, was made over to the concubine, who gave notice to complainant to leave.

NO MEANS OF SUPPORT.

The complainant had no means of support for the past six months, and was given $40 by the defendant in April last. The defendant refused to make any settlement for her. The complainant estimated that she should get at least $150 a month to live on.

Defendant got about $700 a month from a boarding house, and held shares in the Sun Company, the Tung On Life Insurance Company and the Queen's Theatre.

The evidence of complainant, and a Chinese constable, who had served the summons, was heard in the absence of the defendant whom Mr. Denny said had probably gone to Canton because he told his wife yesterday he was going there. Mr. Schofield then made an order for maintenance, the money to be paid into Court.

MR. T. V. SOONG'S DECISION

To Continue Work on Economic Council

Shanghai, Nov. 1.

It is reliably learned that as a result of yesterday's meeting with Mr. T. V. Soong, Mr. Wang Ching-wel has persuaded him to retain his place on the National Economic Council though he has not definitely announced when he will return to Nanking.

Mr. Soong indicated in an interview with pressmen that he intends to spend a short time at Hangchow before returning to Nanking.

The crisis created by Mr. T. V. Soong's resignation is regarded as over and all sides, particularly banking circles, seem inclined to have full confidence in Mr. H. H. Kung's ability to tackle the financial difficulties. Mr. H. H. Kung had a series of meetings with Shanghai bankers before returning to Nanking.—Central News.

"BANDIT" SEASON RETURNS

VOLUNTEER ACTIVITIES IN MANCHURIA

Tientsin, Nov. 1.

Piecemeal reports from Manchuria indicate that "volunteer" activities are again evident, though not to the same extent as in the past two years.

With the Kooling season coming, the Volunteers are afforded with convenient screens. The volunteers in Kirin are particularly active. Last week-end, a body made a surprise attack on Tsinhua inflicting a number of casualties among the local garrison forces. But they withdrew as soon as Manchukuo and Japanese reinforcements arrived.

Many minor clashes between the Chinese volunteers and Manchukuo troops in Liaoning Province are also reported.—Central News.

NEW WOMEN OF THE WORLD

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Some people are born with poise. Others have to acquire it. If you are one of the latter, there are several exercises which will help you to attain the poise so necessary to your appearance as well as your happiness.

Reading aloud helps your voice control, teaches you how to pronounce words and gives you self-assurance in speech.

If you can't think of anything to say when you're with people, remember that reading a couple of newspapers every day, from cover to cover, will furnish you with plenty of conversational topics.

By reading newspapers aloud, you'll be making your first step toward poise do double duty. Your voice will improve and so will your knowledge of conversational topics.

Walking, sitting, and standing gracefully and correctly are very important if you wish to be truly poised. Never sit with your legs wrapped around the bottom of the chair. Keep your knees together and your feet in toward the chair.

Crossing your legs is permitted by even the strictest authorities on etiquette these days. And crossing them gracefully excluded awkwardness on your part. Be sure and cross them well above the knees. Never below.

The best thing to do, of course, is to know that your movements are graceful and then forget about yourself. No woman can have real poise if she is constantly thinking about herself.

THIS STYLE'S IN BLOOM!

Gay Floral Design Gives Dash and Charm to This Printed Frock, Ideal for Cocktail Hour

A printed ensemble of soft reds and blues in a rhythmic floral design makes this dress a particularly lovely costume. The wide, set-in satin sash, three-quarters jacket and charming handmade flowers, worn at the point of the V-neckline, are interesting fashion notes. The outfit can be worn on the street, but is especially good for the tea or cocktail hour.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Oh dear!" sighed Mrs. Robinson. "I get so sick of housework! Every day the same thing to be done again. If I didn't have a good stiff upper lip I don't know what would become of us."

The postman handed in a letter. Mrs. Robinson read it. Her face lighted up and she exclaimed. "Sue is coming! I haven't seen her for five years. Won't we have a grand time!"

Then she began to think and plan. The guest room looked pretty seedy. She had better get out that crotona and run-up those new curtains and covers. All summer she had had that in mind but it had looked like a big job—hopeless in the heat.

Imbued With New Spirit

And the old white furniture was getting scratched. In the spring she had bought enamel to freshen it up but the cans were still unopened. Now her thoughts flew to the paint. She could get it all finished in plenty of time before Sue came.

Mrs. Robinson sang as she worked. For a week she sowed and painted. Then she cleaned the house as if it never had been cleaned before. The thermometer stood at 80 but she didn't feel the heat. She beat rugs in the glaring sun. She cleaned windows when her neighbours were playing bridge. Magic coloured everything she did. Sue came and the hard work was forgotten—if Mrs. R. had thought of it at all.

Now what is to be learned from Mrs. Robinson? Plainly one thing. Work is never work when there is a real interest or a definite purpose behind it. A plan to get somewhere—to achieve some end with an inspiration to boot it along.

And once we get that point of view we have climbed a mountainous question concerning children. How to make them industrious? How to show them the beauty of getting things done?

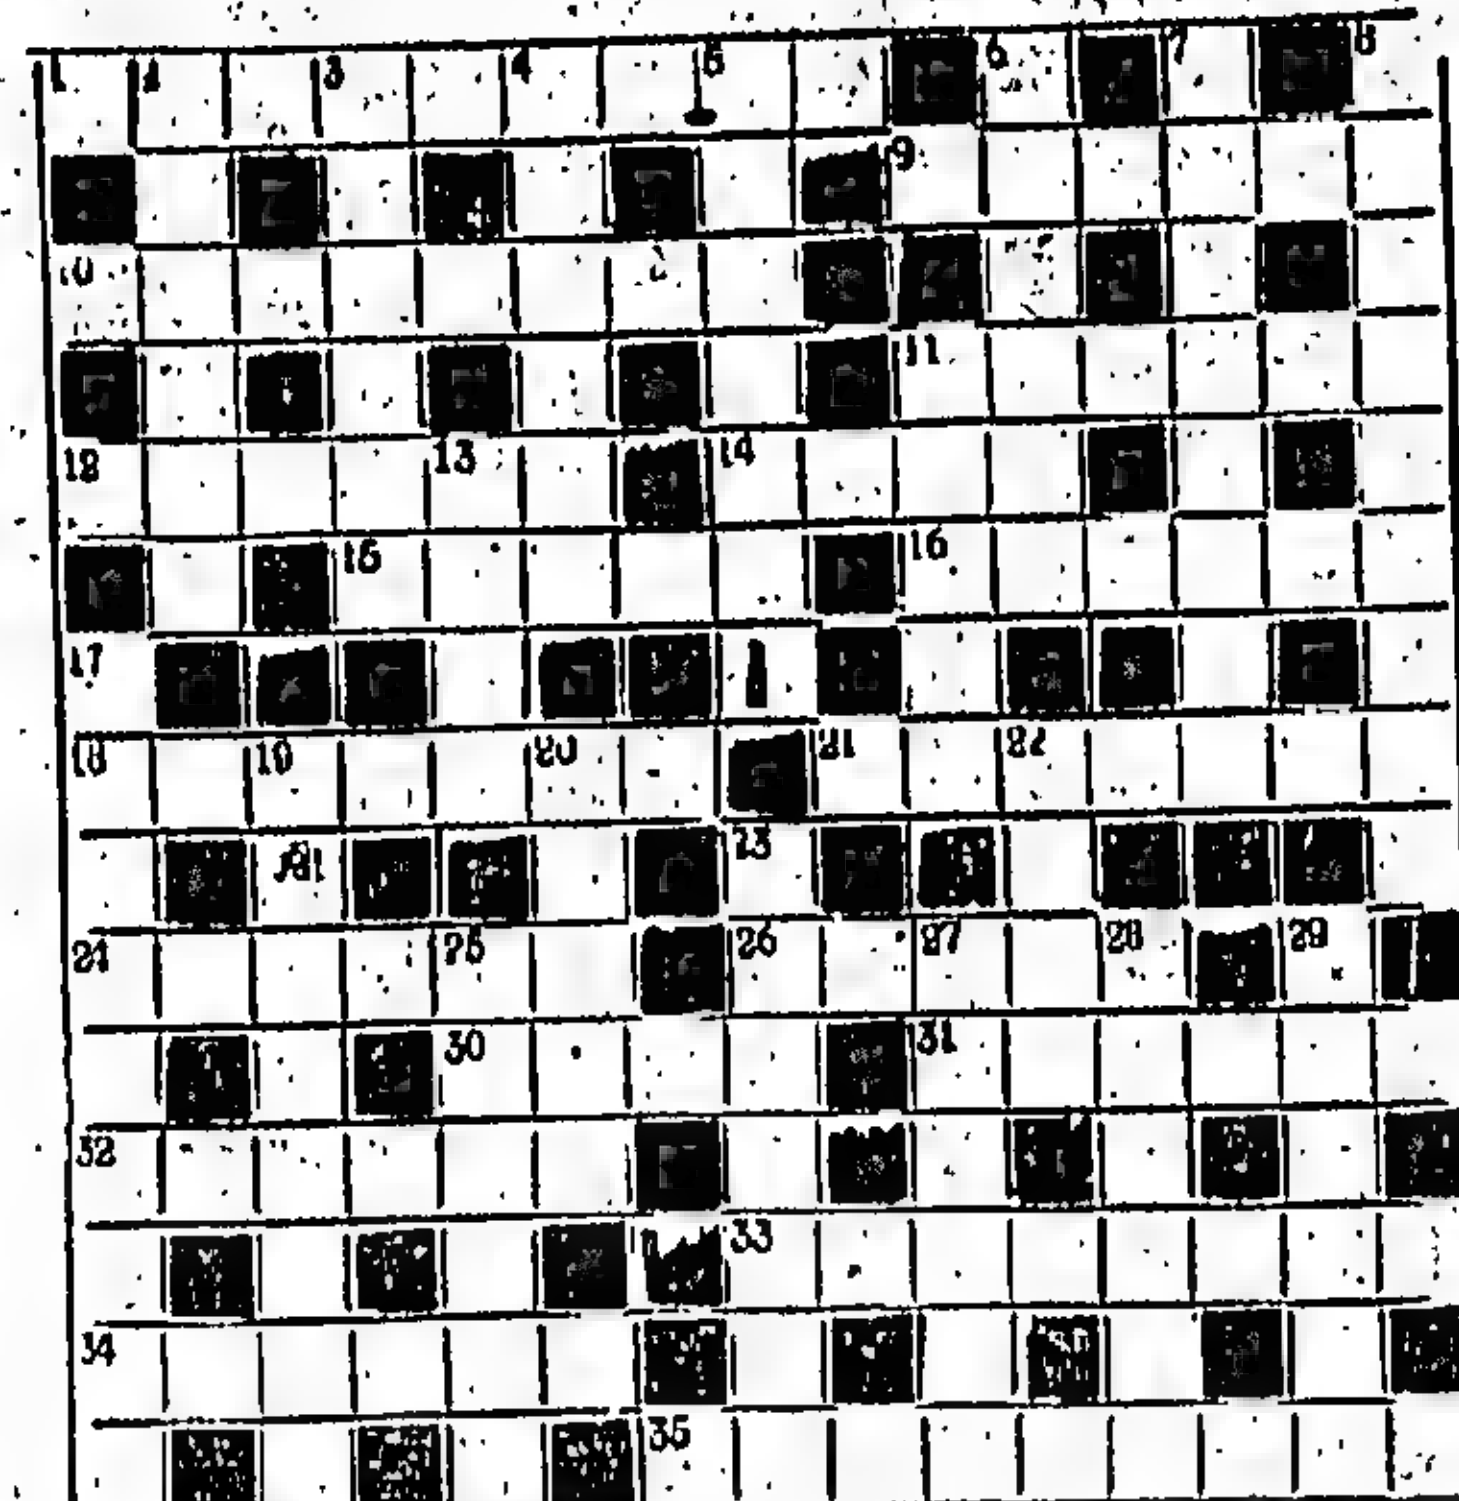

A Goal to Work For.

Cannot we use our imaginations enough to get this interest into them concerning work? We surely are smart enough to dress up a task so that it was a real interest behind it. This is the secret for working for a bribe or a prize, both of which, by the way, are unwise things in themselves. But after all, wasn't Mrs. Robinson working for a prize—the prize of having her house beautiful and her friend's appreciation and comment?

There are so many kinds of prizes. Praise is one. The satisfaction of duty done is another. But children have not reached the point of the latter. They need a more real incentive than that.

We have to work it out as best we may, depending on the type of child and what the work is. But one thing is sure. Interest behind work makes work play.

PEACE ACT AS EXAMPLE TO WORLD

MR. HENDERSON'S SUGGESTION

Mr. Arthur Henderson, President of the Disarmament Conference, speaking at the Labour Conference at Hastings said that millions of the common people, whom they represented, had shown a determination that, so far as lay in their power, there should be no more war.

It was a dedication, a solemn vow, pledging them to the work of peace.

It was a formal break with the old traditions, with the blind loyalties that had made the workers the victim of war.

This new spirit, this willingness to dare and to risk all things in the cause of peace was, he was convinced, the beginning of wisdom and the best guarantee of victory in the battle for a secure peace.

INTERNATIONAL SOLIDARITY.

This new and wider spirit led first of all to the recognition that to have peace we must look beyond the boundaries of our own country.

We must make a living reality of the international solidarity of the workers.

FATE OF CIVILISATION.

We must also welcome as allies all in every country who would join us in the struggle for peace on which the fate of civilisation depended.

The Labour and Socialist movement was international to the core. It was against national and racial as well as class barriers.

It stood for economic organisation, social justice and freedom, not only in one country, but throughout the world.

It recognised that international anarchy was as much the enemy of Socialism as was economic anarchy.

TREMENDOUS TASK.

If it abandoned its international faith it would be powerless to save the world from another war and from the dictatorships and the awful tyrannies which were the consequences of the war.

It was a tremendous task. To have peace we must not only sign treaties removing the right to resort to war, but we must abolish the national equipment and institutions that made war possible and the private interests that lived by war.

We must destroy the narrow loyalties and fanaticisms that made men ready for war, and replace them by a living creative faith in the work of peace. That was a big task.

AMERICA AND RUSSIA.

When they came to the international side of their task of organising peace they found there was one political instrument—and only one—the League of Nations.

The most urgent need was to bring two great Powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, into partnership in the task of organising peace.

Considerable progress had already been made in this direction. He believed it would be possible to get these two countries into some system of world-wide consultation through the League on all matters affecting world peace.

ROAD THROUGH GENEVA.

He was convinced that it would be impossible, even if it were desirable, for this country under any Government to achieve an exclusive alliance with either of these great countries.

The road both to Washington and Moscow lay through Geneva and through world action for constructive peace.

What the world needed to-day was an assurance that when it came to the point the world's peace system would be used.

The treaties guaranteeing peace must be honoured and not regarded as scraps of paper.

He suggested that the British Parliament should pass a Peace Act which would provide that in all cases the Government would submit its international disputes to one of the methods of peaceful settlement.

This Peace Act would not be an empty gesture, since the example would in all probability be followed by other nations.

The whole course of the discussions at Geneva revealed the necessity, now universally recognised, of making each country's armaments a matter of concern to all countries.

INTERNATIONAL TREATY.

To give effect to that principle the amount of other countries' armaments must be fixed in an international treaty.

The execution of that treaty must be placed under the supervision of an international commission.

MASS MARRIAGE.

Rome, Oct. 31.

Over 2,000 couples were married at dawn at the same moment in various churches of the city and province to-day, in celebration of the Fascist Marriage Festival.

The Festival was arranged in order to counteract the severe decline in the Italian birth rate.

Each couple received a photograph of Mussolini and a gift of 500 lire, presented by the Secretary of the Fascist Party, together with the traditional sugared almonds, given at all Italian weddings.

By special arrangement with the Holy See, the first children on the marriages solemnised to-day will be baptised in St. Peter's Rome. This privilege is usually severely restricted.—Reuter.

On that commission Russia and the United States were to be represented.

It would have the duty of investigating and publicly reporting on the state of each country's armament and war industries.

DELAY AND DIFFICULTIES.

The Conference would realise why he could not say all he would like to say on the topic of disarmament.

They would believe him when he told them that he fully shared their impatience at the slowness of the proceedings, at the interminable delay, and the difficulties that had been met.

At the present moment the position might not look too hopeful, but at least it was becoming clear.

We had come face to face with the fundamental political issue, how to reconcile Germany's desire for equality with France's anxiety about security, and the whole world's need for peace.

STORM OF REACTION.

It was clear to all that to-day a storm of reaction was blowing through the world.

On the wings of the storm, like an evil odour from the battlefields, had come a revival of the base and senseless creed of dictatorship, the belief in despotism and international anarchy that brought the world to the catastrophe of 1914.

FAR EAST PEACE CONFERENCE

WIRELESS TO CURE DISEASES

BY ULTRA-SHORT WAVE

ANOTHER GREAT DISCOVERY

—London.

The use of ultra-short wireless waves for the cure of severe internal complaints is advanced by a German scientist, Dr. Erwin Schleichner, in the latest issue of the "British Journal of Physical Medicine."

The doctor reports the cure of complaints such as internal abscesses, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and simple headache, all without operation. The primary wave is generated by an emitter designed like a broadcasting set and in making use of ultra-short waves he found that large carbuncles healed in from 10 to 20 days after 8 to 15 days treatment.

"In most cases the pain and feeling of tension subside after the first treatment," he states. "The absence of pain is particularly appreciated by all patients, because the affected part is not nearly as seriously incapacitated as by the usual surgical or conservative treatment."

"In true migraine (special type of headache) ultra-short wave treatment of the head effected rapid improvement and cure. These treatments are much more pleasant and less strenuous in these cases than present methods, a daily treatment of the head only requires half-an-hour a day, and is very agreeable to the patient."

The "British Journal of Physical Medicine," commenting on this, states it has been found that the ultra-short waves pass most freely through the tissues, which have the smallest capacity resistance, and they traverse fat, brain tissue and bone without difficulty.—Reuter.

SUPPORT IN GERMAN CIRCLES

GENERAL ARAKI'S MOTIVE

Berlin, Oct. 31.

The suggestion by the Japanese War Minister, General Araki, who recommends the early convocation of a Far Eastern Peace Conference, has aroused considerable interest in Germany.

The proposal finds warm support in Berlin semi-official circles, where it is declared that the peace of the Orient is of the greatest importance, not only for the Pacific countries, but also for States apparently not directly concerned in events in that part of the world.

General Araki, in making the proposal, seemed inclined to limit its scope, but German circles favour a large-scale conference.

NINE-POWER TREATY.

It would be of the greatest value, it is pointed out, in overhauling the Nine-Power Treaty and the Naval Treaties of London and Washington, and in bringing Japanese policy within the framework of international politics.

The other Japanese suggestion, of a Non-Aggression Pact with the Soviets is considered very significant in view of Japan's coolness when the Soviet proposed such a pact last year.

LITVINOFF'S MISSION.

The Berliner Tageblatt considers that General Araki's plan is designed mainly to take the wind out of M. Litvinoff's sails when he goes to Washington to negotiate for the opening of diplomatic relations between the Soviet and the United States.—Reuter.

ROTARIAN TIFFIN

H.K. MEMBERS MEET ON PRESIDENT HOOVER

Hongkong Rotarians had a treat yesterday when they were invited to tiffin around the a.s. President Hoover by their president, Rotarian T. B. Wilson.

Welcoming the members and guests on behalf of Capt. F. Anderson and himself, Mr. Wilson said the Captain regretted his inability to be present as he had been detained ashore.

Dean Swann, who has recently returned from leave, was welcomed back by the president, and in reply stated he was very glad to be back. He remarked that during his travels he had not been in any place where Rotary met and had thus been unable to make use of his international ticket.

The following guests were introduced and welcomed.—Rotarians James M. Henry, A. E. Quin, R. H. Gorman, J. M. X. Chollet, S. F. Chien, Geo. Burdick, J. B. Harrison and Dr. Tennyson Howie (all of Canton), O. Stapleton Cotton (president, Tientsin Rotary), T. W. Southam (Amoy Rotary), Mr. D. S. Wylie (Toronto), Eng. Cmdr. R. P. Ninnis, Rev. R. F. Lankester (Yunnanfu), Messrs. F. A. Perry, J. W. Platt, C. L. Shank, P. D. Newman and F. G. Maunder.

Greetings From Other Clubs.

Rotarian Stapleton Cotton said that twenty months ago he came through Hongkong knowing nothing of Rotary. He thought it was a back-slapping and hymn-singing body. But when he went to Tientsin he was enlightened, and shortly after joining complained about the chow and was put in charge of the tiffin arrangements. Tientsin's was the second oldest Rotary club in China, now being in its eleventh year, and he brought to the Hongkong Rotarians the best wishes of that northern club and hoped they would make a point of joining the Tientsin members at tiffin whenever possible.

Rotarian Southam, who is a member of the Amoy Rotary Club, the youngest such club in China, brought greetings from Amoy, and stated that their membership was now about thirty, of which half were Chinese and the remainder of other nationalities.

Rev. Mr. Lankester said that after spending five years in the interior of China as he had done, to come to Hongkong was like getting back to England.

Rotary and Peace.

The President regretted the impending departure for Shanghai of Rotarian Gerondal. Mr. Gerondal, he said, headed the attendance list, and the club would miss him during his absence.

Mr. Gerondal said he was sorry he had to leave. His stay in Hongkong had been most happy.

FIRST PRIZE TICKET NOT SOLD

Shanghai, Oct. 31. Before an immense crowd at the Grand Casino, the drawing of the second China National State Lottery took place to-day.

Ticket Number 485,823 drew the first prize, but it was found to be unsold and a special drawing was made later to decide the destination of the half million dollars.

The figure will stand to determine the winners of "terminal prizes" (holders of tickets with numbers ending in 28).

The second prizes, each worth $100,000 will go to those holding tickets with the numbers 074,718 and 181,674.

As a result of the special drawing, Ticket Number 289,779 won first prize in the Lottery.—Reuter.

JEWISH REFUGEES.

London, Oct. 31.

A Jewish conference, now being held in London, and attended by one hundred delegates from forty-five countries, including America, is planning to appeal to the world of Jewry for two million pounds sterling to assist Jewish refugees from Germany to settle elsewhere.

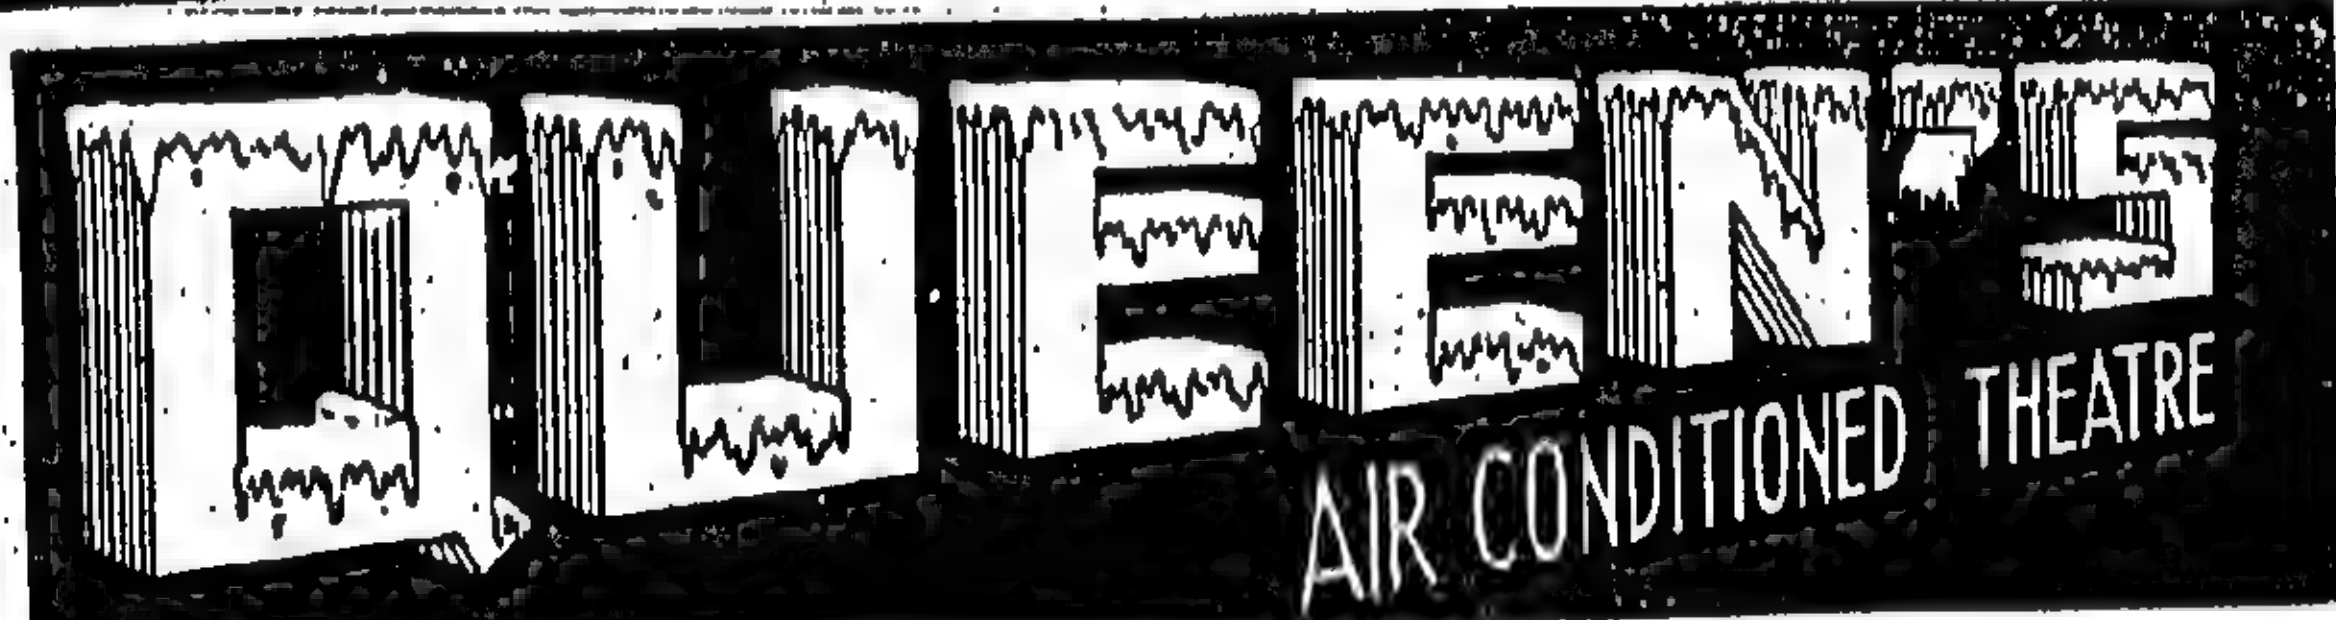

A Central World Council will be formed to issue the appeal and administer the funds collected, and will co-operate with Mr. James MacDonald, the High Commissioner recently appointed by the League of Nations to assist the refugees from Germany.

It is reported that the Cyprus Government has tentatively agreed to settle 50,000 Jewish refugees.—Reuter.

and he had looked forward to remaining here longer. He had no doubt that the Hongkong club would be able to do a lot of good work, and he made the suggestion that the club consider whether or not it would be possible to do anything to prevent war or make for better understanding.

He had read an interesting editorial in the Hongkong Telegraph the previous day which applied to Rotary Clubs all over the world, especially to Hongkong and Shanghai. A paragraph in the editorial read, "More than ever must all men of good will work to fortify the institutions of peace. They must within their own countries and outside of them, band themselves together to declare that they will take no step which will lead to war, and will take many steps which will lead to peace." Towards this end he thought Rotary could do a great deal.

This president was thanked for the invitation he had extended to members, on the motion of Dean Swann.

ASSAULT ON CONSTABLE

After Revenging Attack on His Brother

An assault on a police constable in Wanchai resulted in two men, Lam Mak-wong and Lo Fo being bound over in $50 each to keep the peace for six months, and second defendant being additionally fined $50 or six weeks hard labour by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Detective Sergeant Fitches said that the complainant, Chan Sum, was a Hoklo, as were the two defendants. Complainant's elder brother had been assaulted by two men in the Central district on October 28, and on finding out that the two men lived in a boarding house in Wanchai run by his friend, he thought he would ask his friend to reprimand the two folk. He accordingly went to Wanchai, and there by chance met his brother, the complainant, to whom he unfolded his story.

TOOK LAW INTO OWN HANDS.

They both proceeded to the boarding house, but the friend was not in. The elder brother, however, saw one of his assailants there, and pointed him out to complainant, who took the law into his own hands and gave the man a blow.

The brothers then went away, the elder taking a tram back to the Central District and the constable going on his beat. He had not gone more than eight shop lengths away from the house when he was assaulted by several men, and given a severe beating. One of the assailants was the second defendant. The man whom the constable had beaten was not in the party who assaulted him.

Sergeant Fitches said that the I. G. P. wished a serious view to be taken of the case, because the complainant was so severely beaten that he was bruised all over the body, kicked and punched, and was in hospital for two days. The complainant would be dealt with departmentally for having assaulted a member of the public.

The first defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge, and the second defendant admitted it.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

"We're near the shallows now."

"We've got to go slow."

"You mean, we've got to wriggle
our way through rocks and things?"

"Yes. But we'll be all right."

"See that long white line?"

"Napoleon turned his head, and looked."

"We want to avoid that, don't we?" he observed, sepulchrally.

"We do. But I'm not sorry to see it. I recognise that beggar, and it gives me my bearing again."

"But I've got to use my light now
—it's a nuisance."

"They'll spot us, then, for certain!"

"Not if they're below, old chap."

"There's a chance of that."

"Yes, but s'pose they do spot
us?"

"Well, maybe we'll spot them, too."

"I see. That'll be jolly."

"Cheer up," remarked Leonard,
bending forward and patting his companion's knee. "After all, it's not likely they'll try to murder us!"

"Napoleon swallowed."

"You know, you're so comforting," he said, "I think I'd like to live with you for ever. May I call you Leonard?"

He resumed his rowing. His strokes were careful and slow. A minute later, there was another pause, while they tied handkerchiefs round the oars where they met the rowlocks. This appreciably muffled the sound of their approach, which was further deadened by the dull roar and splash of the breaking waves.

Leonard recognised a big, oddyshaped rock, and found it another useful direction post. Once or twice, their boat scraped against submerged ledges, but the smoothness of the water where there were no breakers, and the slowness of their pace, rendered a catastrophe
unlikely.

Now the breakers seemed to be all around them. Some were close,
others distant. Napoleon drew a big breath, and kept his head.

He stopped making mistakes.

He answered Leonard's whispered
directions unerringly, through necessity rather than skill, with a queer sensation that he was up against a spiritual wall of darkness. What lay on the other side of that wall?

What events? What emotions? What ultimate results? He longed for this nerve-racking trip to end, and his familiar desire to shout gripped
him. But he resisted it, just as a man who is unused to heights has to resist the temptation to throw himself over.

All at once he paused, and took a quick glance over his shoulder.

"Funny thing," he muttered.

"There's breakers all about, but none ahead of us."

"Yes, there are, old chap, but you can't see them," replied Leonard. "That's the side of the ship you're staring at."

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

In the Fox Film presentation of "I Loved You Wednesday" the cast selected by the studio to portray the leading roles is one of the outstanding aggregations of recent screen releases. It features Warner Baxter, Ellsland, Miriam Jordan, Victor Jory and Laura Hope Crews.

The story of the film, adapted from the Broadway stage success, concerns an exotic ballet artist who becomes the world's most famous dancer. But the plot does not wholly concentrate on her success. It dramatizes her love affairs and the underlying forces that keep her from the man who adores her.

Imposed upon by a philandering dilettant of her student days, she cherishes this first romantic love as a thing of beauty. Later, when true love comes the memory of that first affair and the glamorous life she has led as a great public favourite, combine to shake her confidence in her own judgment. In a climax of tremendous sophistication and dramatic force she finds happiness with the man who loves her for what she is, rather than what she stands for.

"Fra Diavolo"

It is hard to picture the popular screen comedienne, Thelma Todd, as having once been a schoolmarm. But Miss Todd, who has the leading feminine role in the new Laurel and Hardy feature-length comedy "Fra Diavolo" opening on Friday at the Queen's Theatre, once actually taught reading, writing, and arithmetic. Now she is teaching filmgoers how to laugh.

Miss Todd was teaching school in Massachusetts when she was introduced to a Paramount "scout". She was persuaded to take a film test which turned out so successfully that she was signed to a contract immediately and enrolled in the Paramount School of Acting.

Miss Todd in private life is Mrs. Pat de Cicco. She writes poetry under an assumed name. She likes jelly beans and practical jokes but she does not like first-night openings or card tricks.

The popular comedienne lives mostly for the present, refusing to look too far ahead at what might or might not come. She has lots of friends in the film colony and is a good hostess. She loves outdoor sports, rides horseback frequently and dances a great deal.

"Bondage"

"Bondage", the new Fox drama revealing the problem of inexperienced youth in search of complete happiness, comes to the King's Theatre on Thursday.

Dorothy Jordan, one of the most beautiful of the younger film stars, and Alexander Kirkland, with a long list of screen successes to his credit, have the leading roles.

The story of "Bondage" is said to deal with a group of youngsters that one meets in the course of every day, each of them seeking the one thing that will take the loneliness out of their lives and give them the romance that is part of every youth's yearning. The paths they take and the unexpected goals they achieve are said to form a climax that is really powerful. The story traces the development of a young girl from her position of a simple shop-girl to her achievement of a character that is representative of all womanhood.

Merle Tottenham, who will be remembered for her role of Annie in "Cavalcade" heads the cast in support

Happy All Day Long

Full of activity, life and vigour, getting the fullest benefit from exercise, all children should be like this. Yet many are never really well, never know the full happiness which springs from perfect health, simply because their parents fail to understand the causes of their unnatural weakness and lack of spirit. It is more than likely that the trouble lies in some irregularity of the digestive organs, very easy to correct if taken in time, but which may lead to serious consequences if neglected.

Wise parents safeguard their children's health by the use of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are invaluable for infants and little children in cases of intestinal derangement, constipation, indigestion, wind, colic, diarrhoea, teething troubles, colds and feverishness. Their mild purgative action assists the natural functions of the body and the child's organs are thereby kept in a healthy condition.

No household wherein there are children is complete without the world renowned remedy for children's ailments.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

of Miss Jordan and Kirkland. Others are Mydia Westman, Jane Darwell, Edward Woods, Isabel Jewell, Dorothy Libaire and Refaella Ottiano.

Alfred Santall directed "Bondage". The screen play is from the pens of Arthur Kober and Doris Malloy, the adaptation being made from the successful novel by Grace Sothcott Leake. Duncan Cramer is said to have provided a highly realistic setting for the film, and the musical background is something of a departure in atmospheric accompaniment.

"The Sign of the Cross"

"The Sign of the Cross" which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre, is something more than an inspiring spectacle within itself. It is proof of the fact that Cecil B. DeMille, master of this type of entertainment in the silent days, can bond sound to his will. It is further proof of the everlasting appeal of entertainment of a spectacular nature, whether the audience happens to be in Rome's Circus Maximus or in the modern motion picture theatre.

The telling of the film's strong story, moreover, has been placed in the hands of an exceptionally talented cast. Frederic March scores as the Roman patrician, Marcus Superbus, who loves a Christian girl; Ellsland is lovely as the Christian, Marcia; Claudette Colbert surpasses her every past performance as the wicked Empress Flavia; Charles Laughton is no less than magnificent as Nero; and Vivian Tobin, Ian Keith, Robert Manning, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Harry Borsford, Arthur Hohl, Nat Pendleton, Clarence Durren, Richard Alexander, William V. Mong, Tommy Conlon, Joe Bonomo and Harold Healy are excellent in supporting roles.

"The Sign of the Cross" is a great religious story, a great love story and a great spectacle. No matter

DECIDES WIFE

Sydney. "Mrs. Hinkler and I have come to the conclusion, after consulting with our lawyers and considering the lapse of time since Bert's death, that it will be better to leave him in Italy, especially in view of the splendid memorial which the Italian people have provided for him."

This statement was made by Mrs. H. A. Hinkler, mother of the late Squadron-Leader Bert Hinkler, who returned to Brisbane after having spent a six months' holiday in Western Australia.

Mrs. Hinkler declined to discuss the question of whether her son's body should be given a last resting place in Brisbane, as the Premier (Mr. W. F. Smith) had suggested, or in Bundaberg, in accordance with the wishes of the friends of Bert Hinkler in his native town. She said that the delay in settling this question was in some measure due to the law in Italy, which prohibited the removal of her son's remains until six months after his burial.

Mrs. Hinkler said that the widow of the airman had settled in Southampton with her people, and was not likely to return to Australia during the lifetime of her mother. She had abandoned all plans to take up aviation, which she was considering when the airman was alive.—Reuter.

PERFORMING RIGHTS

The descent upon Hongkong of the Performing Rights Society is interesting to the average person mainly as an illustration of the extent to which official control is exercised over almost every human action and impulse. It seems next to impossible these days for an individual to be responsible for any sort of action affecting a second party without the existence of a legal enactment governing it in some fashion or other. No-one can fairly cavil at the object of the Performing Rights Society; some protection for the authors of musical works is obviously necessary if they are not to end their days in poor law institutions; although some resentment may be felt at the termination of a long innings, the occasioning of trouble and inconvenience, particularly as the cost of the collection of fees—presumably the objective—is likely in a small place like Hongkong to cancel out the prospect of any worth while bounty to musical composers and authors. Such considerations will not weigh with the Society. The Colony's broadcasting service may suffer; café proprietors with loud-speaker installations may have a problem to think over; but it seems that the Colony must pay and look as pleasant as it possibly can about the payment, even while feeling doubtful whether any real benefit will accrue to anyone as a result of the innovation. The sole matter of very real concern in this situation is the future of ZBW. Its existence seems to have been the bait for the appearance of the Performing Rights Society; and the demand for royalties, added to the more easily-understood refusal of the music stores to supply free record programmes indefinitely, creates difficulties not to be easily overcome. Either development would have provided sufficient cause for rumination in itself; coming together, the Broadcasting Committee may well be forgiven if it is temporarily at loss. One thing is certain: the quality and variety of programme must suffer unless a new source of revenue and fairly substantial is soon discovered. Such is the law that it is not possible for ZBW to rely on Daventry, for instance, without incurring technical responsibility for royalties as a further public performance. In

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

Most people thought Mr. Montagu Norman to be joking in his recent comment upon the shifting scenes at Washington. To-day even those on the spot find difficulty in following the movements. If the eyes are taken off the stage for as much as the proverbial minute, the picture has changed almost beyond recognition by the time a second glance is taken. Things actually accomplished are being overlooked because of the swiftness of the movement.

BANK CONTROL

Look, for example, at some of the implications behind some of the recent trends of the N.R.A. programme. President Roosevelt has authorised the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to plunge into the banking business with anything from two to four millions of money to "invest." Exactly where will the old American banking system be when efforts are made to square accounts. In addition, there are to be noted the definite support for organised labour, and the vast network of price-fixing, profit-stabilising and consumer-protecting devices which seem destined to become a permanent part of American institutions.

NOT SATISFIED

And still President Roosevelt is not satisfied. This is chiefly because human calculations of probable effects fall far short in the result mainly because they fail to take account of the human element. Advanced theories will always meet with resistance sufficient to damage if not destroy the plans of their advocates. The President is, therefore, continually forced to further experiment and is now finally committed to the Commodity Dollar. The first spectacular contribution to the thesis failed badly. It took less than a week to prove convincingly that such a revolution in the basis of currency could not be achieved without some reference to the international aspect. Another hasty jump only demonstrated that the need for re-examination still existed.

PEGGED CURRENCIES

Unsuspectingly, perhaps, a valuable contribution towards world recovery may have been made. The pegging of the dollar and the pound would be one of the best guarantees of stability in these difficult days. Senator Pittman sees in the developments the prospect of the permanent stabilisation of currencies and a return to the gold standard by all nations, and he may not be far wrong. But it will not be a return to the gold standard as understood in pre-war days; that is easy to judge. The difficulty is to foresee in exactly what final form an internationally accepted monetary standard will emerge from the present chaos.

PANNED ECONOMY

M. Sarraut's address to the French Chamber on Friday should be more than normally interesting. Such hints as have been given of his Cabinet's programme suggest that France is likely to draw more than ever economically within itself and that economic isolation will become as marked a feature of general policy as it is in the United States. Planned economy, unfortunately, means little more than this since the failure of the World Economic Conference. In a planned world economy, obviously, it would mean precisely the contrary.

short, it looks very much as though ZBW has perforce to begin all over again, from an entirely new starting-point, to tackle old problems afresh from a new angle.

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

By REGINALD POUND

NEURASTHENIA . . . nervous . . . psychasthenia . . . hypochondria . . . like a dreadful discord of clanking chains these names occur with dismal frequency in the grand crescendo of modern life.

Foreshortened into "nerves," they become the password that ushers an over-lengthening procession of distract human beings through consulting-rooms, nursing-homes, hospitals, health clinics, confessional boxes, divorce courts.

Nerves . . . nerves . . . nerves . . . the disease of our age; the curse that civilisation has put on the brow of wilful man; the heaviest, the costliest social burden of the lot.

Among the flagrantly many national secrets that no census has ever revealed is the number of people for whom the sun is always partly in eclipse, for whom existence is one long wrestling-match with dark powers in little Gehennas of their own.

What is the story behind the mounting graph of nervous illness?

When the case-books of the twentieth century are dug up from the ruins of Harley-street a thousand years on, what will they disclose to the peering, attentive professors of that time?

What subtle disharmonies in the soul of man, circa 1933, will they reveal?

The medical historians of the future will probably note with interest the recurrence of certain catchwords taken from our current neurology. Yesterday it was "inferiority complex." To-day it is "conflict." To-morrow a new one may be lifted from the Italian-studied dictionaries of psychology: Schizophrenia.

I had not heard it until a day or two ago I went among the medical magi as a preliminary to this brief and no doubt daringly inexact survey of the flowing tide of psychic unhappiness.

I gathered that it denotes a state of mind formerly labelled even less prettily. I also gathered that the ranks of the schizophrenes are now scores deep, comprising a pallid, tight-lipped army, chanting a psalm of march, a psalm of a lady, the march song an adaptation from Wordsworth: "The world is too much for us."

For there you have (I discovered) the source of a vast deal of nerve misery—the basic disinclination of the individual to face reality and his failure to indulge in the nimble acrobatic feats that enable others to skip over or dodge round the rocks, pot-holes, and what not that bestrew man's road down the ages.

Too much potting and fusing over when young . . . instigate at war with society . . . unsympathetic handling in adolescence . . . certain of the more violent kinds of religious influence . . . lack of self-discipline . . . all these, I found, are down in the physicians' black-list as making for much subsequent suffering under the heading of "nerves."

Given these conditions, or some of them, together with various factors of ill-health, and you are a fairly sure candidate for the grey brotherhood of the nerve-wrecked and the desperately sick of soul.

My talks with the doctors showed that at the back of any number of nervous nerve disturbances are fears as numerous as they are groundless . . . ridiculous fears . . . chimera belonging to the dim terrain of childhood before reason began to exert its dominion over the growing mind.

Fear is the dynamic force behind a huge number of nerve cases. I was told. It zigzags through human society like black lightning, unseen but enormously powerful, paralysing the health, the happiness, the efficiency of millions.

It sets the mob howling. It drives men to drink, women to drugs, breaks up homes . . . fear, the psychic fiction that so many mistake for hard fact; the long shadow that, illogically, is always there.

The doctors declared that any number of nervous breakdowns have their origin simply in broken rules of sensible living—not enough good quality sleep ("Balm of hurt minds . . . chief nourisher in life's feast"); dietary ignorance and abuse, over-indulgence; neglect of the prime virtues of fresh air and exercise; over-work—with this last not nearly so high in the list as is commonly supposed.

The penalty of any of these obvious sins can be severe; and many there be that have paid it.

Each of the authorities I talked with had his own theory, his own path of research; each said that there is still a great deal about "nerves" that cannot at present be adequately explained.

But, thinking back over my talks with them, I recall that there seemed to be a general note of agreement on what is psychologically known as man's will to power—that over-ruling passion to outshine one's fellows, which, in extremes, peoples the wards of mental hospitals with pathetically comic Napoleons and Queen Victorias.

We all want to be what we are not; the damage is done when we aspire—and perspire—to be what we never can be.

There is the artist who day-dreams that he is a genius, when he is simply a good craftsman; the singer who cannot understand why she is no prima donna; the humbly born wife who longs to be "a lady"; the inept politician who is crazy to be a leader.

To all these, and many others, the shock of finding that the cup of life is well and truly running over with disappointment often supplies the last kick that sends them into the fantastic world of dreams where they can indulge, unchecked, their fatuous longing for majesty, dominion, and power.

Are the doctors (you ask) declaring war, then, on ambition?

Most assuredly not; but as part of their prescription for happiness they are increasingly emphasising that ambition must be logically directed and impelled by motives which do not impose such disastrous strains and stresses on the personality.

To sum up: Nearly all functional nervous disorders are curable, and a great majority are preventable.

The doctors are gradually casting out the devils haunting this generation, in travail with its nerves, so that those who come after may be free.

The Very Idea!

IT'S CHESS TOO BAD

WE notice that, now that winter is coming, the Hongkong Chess Club is getting out its boards and blowing the dust off its pawns.

Chess is a game for brilliant minds; we do not like it. It goes back to medieval days, when they had knights and things like that, and our only regret is that it didn't stay there.

Chess pieces consist of sixteen pieces, of which a vast majority are pawns. Pawns cannot do anything except get in the way of your own pieces, making them very valuable to the opponent until he has captured them.

The queen is the big shot in chess, being much more powerful than the king, just as in real life. A queen can move all over the board without warning, and usually does. The object of the game is to capture the king and finish the fracas in time for a late dinner. Beginners at chess are inclined to be impatient and take only fifteen minutes to think up a move. You can't get anywhere by rushing through like that.

Good chess players are named Casanovitz and things like that. They come from the Balkans and open the game with the Queen's Gambit Declined. This is a variation of the Aw Boon play with the castles shifting instead of the end. We do not know why they always decline this, but they do. We go them one better by declining to play at all.

You ought to know something about the other pieces. Like the bishops, for instance. The bishops are nondescript-looking things which move caty-cornered. They cannot go by a red light. The castles, on the other hand, move sideways, which is very illogical. The knights are called knights because they look like horses and are even crazier in their movements than real ones. They go two squares in one direction and one in another or vice versa, not having sense enough to cut across and conserve their energy.

There is great intellectual diversion to be derived from chess. We are sure of this, because it gives us a headache. There is nothing like intellectual diversion.

An argument in favour of the game is that the pieces make lovely playthings for the baby.

FREE RECORDS

We notice in a morning newspaper that the radio columnist is appealing for gramophone records for ZBW. We are prepared to donate him several.

Let's see, now. He can have "E-e-e-e-e, Mr. Hemingway," "Pink Elephants," "She Was Only Somebody's Daughter," "My Boop-oop-a-deep Doop," "Here Lies Love." Yes, and we'll also, throw in "Stormy Weather" for good measure.

They all belong to our neighbour.

VICE VERSA

Speaking of records, one of our favourites is "The Voice in the Old Village Choir." And speaking of vices reminds us of an experience we had at Home once.

In case you don't know it we were a bit of an amateur carpenter in our quiet way. Nothing much, you know, only when it came to knocking down the old fowl house and building a new one, we had the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank contractors licked to a frazzle. We may have occasionally dropped a hammer on somebody's head, but we didn't drop five-ton lumps of masonry.

We were cured of carpentering when we went into a hardware shop one day, and approached the lady behind the counter.

"Have you any vices?" we asked her confidentially.

We have often wondered why she slapped our face.

HOLLYWOODN'T

Things are no bad in Hollywood that one girl has had to part with her wedding rings.

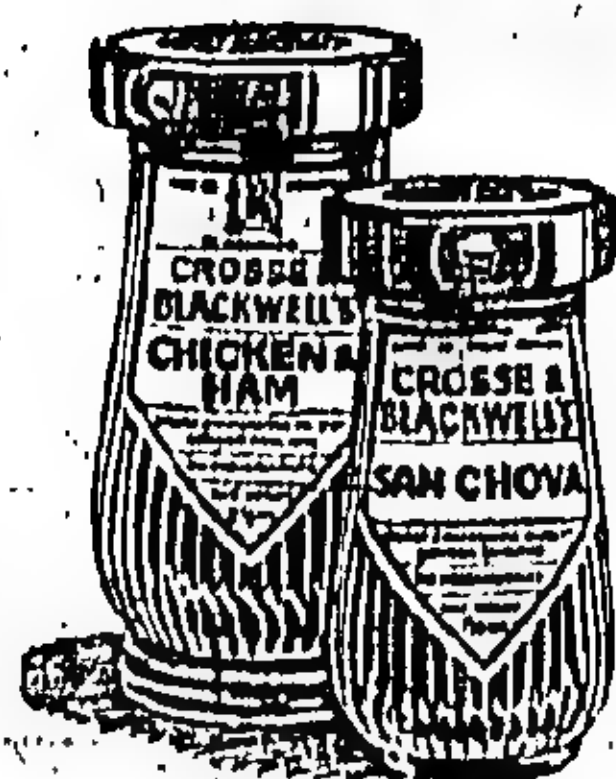

A MAX FACTORY

We are told that women used to paint their faces in the Middle Ages. They still paint their faces in the middle ages.

"I hope you're satisfied! Killing off all the wild animal life."

NEW YORK STOCK
EXCHANGEYESTERDAY'S MARKET

According to Messrs. Swan Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was dull yesterday. Business done 1,470,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's market: The market was so narrow with minimum fluctuations that it was impossible to determine its trend. This dullness in the market was caused by traders holding aloof pending clarification of the monetary situation and ignoring several usual market factors such as easier U.S. dollar, higher gold price and the President's settlement of the price for rails. Our New York Office Cable (This Morning).

Stocks: The market displayed a firm underdone and seemed to have completed its secondary reaction. Purchases are suggested on recessions. Wheat: The market was dull and lacked features and trade news. There were unimportant declines on absence of buyers. Buying is still favoured on declines. Cotton: The market was steady on trade buying and rumours of the possibility of the United States and Great Britain coming to a working agreement regarding gold. The President's unending inflationary power is still an underlying factor but general buying is small pending the Government's crop report on November 8th. Silver: The market closed firm on rumours of the possibility of the Government buying newly mined domestic silver. Cable received last night during our Night Service 'Inflationary pressure not sufficient to create inflation psychology. Steel companies accept compromise to manufacture rails at $36.75'.

Y.M.C.A. FAIL TO KEEP IT GOING

HONGKONG LADIES GIVEN A FRIGHT

The Y.M.C.A. first eleven suffered another reverse when they were defeated by the odd goal in five by the Club de Recreio in a friendly hockey match played at King's Park yesterday afternoon. Play on the whole, was of an average standard there being no brilliant individual performances.

The 'Y' took the lead within the first few minutes of the commencement of play, R. Baldwin finding the net as the result of a solo burst through. The Recreio retaliated, W. Reed, at centre-half, playing a clever game, while A. M. Xavier led the forward line well. They equalised through Xavier. The 'Y' continued to attack, but Botelho kept them at bay. S. Fowler, on the right wing, got going and from his right wing, connected the shot to give them the lead. Before the interval C. Roza Pereira netted the Recreio's second goal.

On resumption after the breather, the Recreio forwards combined well, C. Roza Pereira finding the net to give them the lead. Sheila, the 'Y' custodian, was inclined to come out too far from his goal when meeting an attacking forward. A ding-dong struggle ensued, Baldwin putting in some good work on the left wing. Try as they did the 'Y' could not and the net. G. P. Lammet was a notable absentee from their forward line.

LINCOLNS WIN.

Meeting the South Wales Borderers on the U.S.R.C. ground yesterday afternoon, the Lincolnshire Regiment emerged winners by the odd goal in three in a thrilling contest.

MATCH CANCELLED.

The friendly fixture between the Central British Association and the Royal Engineers which was to have been played at Sookunpo yesterday, was cancelled. The C.B.A. and mediating the Hongkong Hockey Club seniors at King's Park this afternoon, and a fast game is expected.

CLOSE THING FOR HK. LADIES

St. Andrew's Give Good Display

St. Andrew's Ladies extended the Cacer Clark Cup holders in a friendly game on the Marina ground yesterday, and the result, two goals to one in favour of the Hongkong Ladies was a fair indication of the run of play.

The Saints played a three full back game, disposing the services of a goal keeper, and this proved an asset in breaking up their opponents' rushes.

E. Bonnar lead the Hongkong Ladies' attack and was a great improvement on last year. She was ably supported on either side by B. Liang and J. Dalziel. E. Solby on the left wing was responsible for the only goal netted in the first half. On the opposite wing E. Bell played a hard game but the passes sent out to her from the centre were often badly placed and too far ahead.

D. Robertson played a useful game, at centre half and had as supporters H. K. Lowe on the right and B. Hance on the left. M. Wallace played a brilliant game at left back. She is steady and has a fine clearing hit. M. Bird was between the sticks but had little to do.

M. Woolley was the pick of the St. Andrew's side. She ranks among the best centre forwards in ladies' hockey. Her stickwork is neat and she is fast. F. Wong and I. Glittins played well on the wings. M. White was the pick of the halves, while E. Hamson and E. Landolt played soundly at back.

At the interval the Hongkong Ladies led by one goal to nil. E. Solby scoring. The Saints equalised soon after the re-start through M. Woolley, and just before the final whistle J. Dalziel gave the Hongkong Ladies the deciding goal.

CLUB SENIORS.

The following have been selected to represent the Hongkong Hockey Club seniors in a friendly match against the Central British Association on the Marina ground at 5.15 p.m. to-day:—L. D. Skinner; A. A. Dand (Capt.); J. Rodger; A. A. Reed; H. J. D. Lowe and E. V. Reed; J. L. Tolley; A. N. Other; G. E. R. Divett; J. E. Potter and T. J. Price.

ST. ANDREW'S TEAM.

The following will represent St. Andrew's Club in a friendly hockey match against the Royal Army Service Corps at Sookunpo this afternoon at 5 o'clock sharp.—R. H. Wong; F. A. Broadbridge and E. H. P. White; E. MacNider, J. T. K. Gilchrist and A. B. Hamson; G. A. White, A. N. Other, N. A. E. Mackay, E. F. Fincher and M. Weill.

PALESTINE RIOTS ADMONISHMENT

HAIFA HARBOUR OPENING

STATEMENT OF POLICY

London, Oct. 31.

The magnificent new harbour at Haifa, the first to be constructed in Palestine since Herod built the port of Caesarea in honour of his Imperial patron, was formally opened to-day.

It transforms an unprotected roadstead into the finest harbour in the Levant.

Under British rule, Palestine has regained its pre-eminence as a trading centre and as a highway joining Western Asia with Northern Africa.

Palestine is actually one of the most prosperous countries in the world to-day and Haifa is the nerve centre of its commercial development.

The opening of the harbour, which has cost about £1,250,000, and which encloses an area of 400 acres, was to-day the occasion for an exchange of wireless messages between the High Commissioner, Sir Arthur Wauchope, and the Colonial Secretary, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister.

BRITISH LOAN.

The High Commissioner expressed the belief that the harbour would result in an increase in prosperity to Palestine, whose rapidly expanding trade it was primarily designed to serve. He also referred to the fact that it would not have been built had not the British Government guaranteed the loan raised by the Palestine Government to provide the necessary capital.

The Colonial Secretary, after congratulating the Harbour Works Department and the consulting engineers, Messrs. Rendel, Palmer and Tritton, mentioned that during the four years of harbour construction, Arabs and Jews had worked together and that about 70 per cent. of its cost had been spent in Palestine itself. Having referred to the great value that such a harbour must be to Palestine, the Colonial Secretary made an outspoken reference to the recent riots.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

"To-day's ceremony," he said, "is overshadowed by the deplorable disturbances which have taken place. I would speak very plainly to the people of Palestine. Thirteen years ago, Great Britain accepted the Mandate of Palestine. The Mandate carried with it a clear duty to the Arabs and to the Jews.

"That duty will be discharged fully and fairly without fear or favour.

"There is, under the Mandate, an obligation to facilitate the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people. But at the same time there is an equally definite obligation to safeguard the rights of all inhabitants of Palestine.

"Both obligations will be most carefully observed.

"It will be the constant aim of British policy to foster and promote the well being of all Palestine.

PLANS IN HAND.

"Plans are now in hand in which the High Commissioner has had a great personal share which will materially benefit all classes of the community. That work will go forward.

"But there is paramount duty to preserve Law and Order. That duty too will be most thoroughly discharged.

TRIBUTE TO OFFICIALS.

"I wish here to repeat the tribute I have already paid to all ranks of the police for the fortitude with which they have carried out their duty.

"Law and order will be maintained throughout the land. Palestine is fortunate in having at this time a High Commissioner devoted to its interests and who every man in Palestine knows in his heart is fair and just. He has the complete confidence of His Majesty's Government and I appeal to all men of goodwill to give him their loyal support and cooperation in his work for the common good of all."

CHIANG KWANG-NAI

Speculation on Visit to Canton

Canton, Nov. 1.

Speculation is rife over the exact object of the visit of the Governor of Fukien, General Chiang Kwang-nai, who arrived here by a special Canton-Kowloon train from his native village yesterday.

He authorised a statement which conveyed nothing beyond his repeated explanation that his visit from Fukien was only concerned with his son's marriage.

Such a simple statement has not been sufficient to dispel the general belief that his visit to Canton carries with it certain political purposes.—Central News.

NEW YORK NERVOUS

UNCERTAIN ABOUT THE GOLD POLICY

New York, Oct. 31.

The stock market moved over a narrow range to-day, and closed the session off fractionally.

In spite of the fact that the dollar was lower and that the R.F.C. gold price was up 16 cents at $32.12, great uncertainty existed in financial and trading circles as to the effect that President Roosevelt's foreign gold policy would have both abroad and at home.

It is believed that the President has no desire to precipitate a currency depreciation race with other countries and it is sincerely to be hoped that a working agreement to raise world price levels will be the outcome of the current conference between British and American representatives in Washington.

It must be borne in mind that the President still has many more weapons in his financial armoury for the raising of the domestic price level and the expectation that these will be used in present methods do not succeed has buoyed the hopes of traders and the country in general. New York financial circles are opposed to any action which would tend to upset world conditions which are not too stable anyway.

The fact that the steel companies have agreed to meet the Federal Rail Coordinator, Joseph E. Eastman's rail price offer of $36.75 per ton is considered a very constructive move in the Government's progress toward helping the heavy industries.—per Swann, Culbertson and Fritz.

AVOIDING A CLASH.

America Wants Britain To Co-operate.

New York, Oct. 31.

The United States has assured Great Britain that no currency war is desired by the administration, and has invited British co-operation, according to the Washington correspondent of the Herald-Tribune.

Sir Frederick Leith-Ross has cabled to London for further instructions, with a view to establishing a loose dollar-pound link designed to raise the price of gold and in order not to overstrain the ratio between the two currencies, this correspondent adds.

The same authority states that the administration in Washington is hopeful of some co-operation from Great Britain, in spite of reports of a disagreement between Sir Frederick Leith-Ross and Professor Warren, one of President Roosevelt's advisers.

The New York Times believes that co-operation is possible if the United States promises to prevent further weakening of the dollar in relation to the pound at a level temporarily acceptable to Great Britain.—Reuter.

Many Obscurities.

London, Oct. 31.

Too many obscurities have yet to be clarified before any definite view will be obtainable of the effect of the latest phase of President Roosevelt's experiment in gold purchasing abroad, declares the Times City Editor to-day.

Yesterday's American price of gold showed a wide margin of about 21 pence over the estimated London quotation at 8 o'clock. And even though this diversity makes no allowance for the possible cost of shipment, it is obviously an attractive price.—Reuter.

According to a report received by Messrs. Swann, Culbertson and Fritz last night, the American gold price yesterday was U.S.$32.12, a gain of 12 cents in a day.

TWO HUNTERS KILL 130 ELEPHANTS

Bulawayo.

Two hunters, Messrs. Hall and Rangley, engaged by the Northern Rhodesian Government in connection with the protection of native gardens and the reduction of the number of elephants in the northern portion of the territory, have accounted for more than 130 elephants. Among those shot was one with 101b tusks, which but for being damaged at the tips, would have touched the 100lb mark. While a number of tuskless elephants were among the bag, the accrual of ivory to the Government should well cover the cost of the expedition.—Reuter.

Your teeth need this extra protection

A tooth paste should do more than keep your teeth white and attractive, it should also keep the gums firm and free from pyorrhea, it should keep the whole mouth germ free and healthy.

This is particularly necessary in tropical climates where germs of disease increase so rapidly.

PREVENTS PYORRHEA

"ROBIN" GAVE ELEVEN HOME WINNERS LAST WEEK

AN ARRAY OF BIG-TIME MATCHES THIS WEEK

PORTSMOUTH AT HIGHBURY AND SPURS AT WEST BROMWICH

SEVERAL INTERESTING THIRD DIVISION CLASHES

(By "The Pilgrim")

SATURDAY'S engagements on the green football fields of Home present very little encouragement for any but the most discerning punters.

THOSE who came up last week—would do better to keep to the small odds if they would keep some of their winnings.

THE revived Arsenal should get the better of Pompey whose visit will attract one of the biggest crowds that has filled the new Highbury stadium this season. I wonder if the improvement in the London team is directly attributable to Dunne whose dramatic transfer a month ago from Sheffield United at a fee of about £8,000 was effected in an hour?

A year ago the Midland club put his fee at £12,000 but unfortunately for them, their financial position has changed considerably since then. Except for an alarming defeat of 6-0 at Huddersfield, the Bramall-Lane eleven has at least not done worse since they lost their star.

Spectacular Exhibition Assured

The West Bromwich Albion—Spurs match should be the most spectacular exhibition of the day. It is a meeting of classic style with skilful determination but I rather fancy that the Londoners will carry the day.

Brentford's recent sweeping changes will scarcely suffice them in their visit to Blackpool but I expect West Ham to continue their all-conquering style against Bury.

Hull have leapt back to form and I think they are capable of accounting for Plymouth, whilst Notts Forest are travelling to Lincoln to meet the inferiority-complex eleven. Bolton can be expected to go all at Southampton as they are striving to regain their lead.

Northampton used to be a certain home bet but I am afraid they have lost confidence lately whilst Reading are straining at the leash, so to speak.

After their great day at Exeter, Norwich will welcome Cardiff as the donors of a useful brace. That is the safest bet of the day whilst perhaps the trickiest one is the Queen's Park—Charlton match.

The Alpha and Omega Meet

The leaders and the lowliest meet in the Northern section, Chesterfield taking the short journey to Rotherham who have not yet won a match before their own supporters. I imagine Tranmere are easily capable of taking full honours at York City and Walsall will stay at home and avenge last week's beating at the expense of Rochdale.

In the Scottish League, Motherwell will have a hard fight at Dundee but I don't think the homesters, good as they are, will spill the leader's record.

St. Johnstone are greatly improved and their clash with Falkirk will be a great spectacle.

Rangers are certain to send Clyde empty away but Kilmarnock will probably get a check at Aberdeen.

Making Ground on the Wing

by "Saracen."

The wing forward-to-day plays a more important part than ever before. Since the alteration of the off-side law he has been given far greater scope and both in making goals and in creating the opening for them his responsibilities have increased enormously. Some club managers in fact consider that the outside men have better chances of scoring than even the centre forward.

Perhaps the first essential of modern wing play is that the man should get away quickly. No one has surpassed Sammy Crookes of Derby County in his speed when collecting a pass, getting the ball under control and going ahead. His colleagues on the other wing, Duncan, has developed the same idea. The latter in fact has become adept in trapping the ball and sweeping it forward with the same movement of the foot and in this way he gains time to allow him to beat an opponent. This trick of Duncan's is not a new one, but it is difficult to carry out successfully.

A NUISANCE.

This quickness in getting off the mark with the ball does not always depend on the wing forward. He must indeed be seriously slowed down unless he is given the ball reasonably. The ideal pass is one which allows the player to go forward to take it. The poor one is that which directs the ball straight to him and compels him to stand and wait its arrival. In those circumstances it is almost certain that he will have to meet a direct challenge by an opponent and the latter may have an equally good chance of getting the ball.

The winger who fiddles with the ball is a nuisance; he spoils the attack. In delaying either to go ahead or to get the ball back into the middle he plays into the hands of the opposing defenders by granting them time to recover and take up correct positions.

It is recognized, too, that a man must not patrol the side line. The day when it was considered proper for him to race to within six yards of the corner flag and then centre has passed. Goal is the target and the closer he can take the ball to it the greater the chance to score.

Besides, a quick low pass inside is far more effective than a centre which means the ball travelling in to the middle through the air for one of the big modern centre halves to head away.

Trickiness on the wing is not so important as speed and directness. The man who can race away and get the defence off its balance is the match winner. There is no better example of this than Joe Hulme, the Arsenal outside right.

BASTIN REGARDED AS THE MOST VERSATILE PLAYER: HALVES & BACKS A SPECIALITY

MAW, of Leicester had the misfortune to see two goals directly attributable to him, disallowed for offside in a recent match.

JACK Smith of Portsmouth has won a great reputation as a scorer and his combination with the cunning Enson is the team's greatest asset.

STANLEY Jackson, the Bradford City inside forward who was recently transferred to Millwall, toured Canada previously with the English F. A.

MR. W. McCracken, the Millwall manager has often made overtures for this player.

BASTIN is on top of his form just now and by popular vote is acknowledged the most versatile and polished footballer of the moment.

AFTER a poor beginning, West Bromwich Albion have settled down to class play.

W. G. Richardson, their leader, scored three in five minutes against Derby.

THE Howthorns have another Richardson in their team and he shines as admirably in defence as his leader in attack.

TO talk of other things—I wonder how it is that some clubs always find crack players for certain positions?

WEST Ham occur readily to mind, because no matter what weakness time may show in other departments, they always have a capable man to lead the forwards.

THE fact that Beeson is playing to-day at full-back for the English League reminds me that the Wednesday seem to find full-backs and half-backs with ease, where other clubs sigh in vain for the strong men to appear.

LOOK at Wednesday's little lot—Loan, Leach, Blenkinsop, Strange, and Marsden. I don't know of any English club who can match this list.

BEESON has moulded his style on Hinkinsop, and I doubt if there could be found a better example, but, more than that, the new star has responded to patient coaching.

WEDNESDAY, I am assured, have another player in Burrows, a half-back, who is going to make the selectors sit up and take notice in the near future.

HE was signed for a few pounds from Mansfield, with an extra condition.

IT was agreed that when he had played a certain number of matches for the Sheffield side, they should make further payments. That period has not yet expired, but so pleased are the Wednesday directors with Burrows, they have already sent a cheque to Mansfield.

Remarkable Achievement Last Week

"Robin" is still leading the way among the local forecasters of Home football, and last week achieved the performance of giving 11 out of 12 correct home winners in his "Beat the Book" selections, whilst he further picked two out of three away winners.

Although astray on his three draws, "Robin" was able to return a percentage of 72 for 18 matches.

These figures, as well as the remarkable consistency shown in the past makes the Telegraph "Beat the Book" list the most accurate guide offered to local punters.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER 'XIV

Through the Blackness

"I may have sweet ideas, but returning to a comfortable bed at the Marmad Hotel isn't one of them," said Leonard Softon. "I mean to find a boat, Truelove, if I have to search the beach the whole night through."

"Well, if you jolly well think you're going to search alone, you're jolly well mistaken," responded Napoleon. "But look here, I say. Suppose we don't find one? Do we build one?"

"While we're about it, why not a couple?" smiled Leonard. "Then we'll have one each."

After a final glance round the lugubrious chamber, they retraced their way through the narrow neck into the outer cave. There was no sign of the intruder, but for all that they walked cautiously to the cave entrance. Peering out, they saw no form and heard no footfall. The darkness was unpopulated, saving for themselves.

"Be careful where you tread," advised Leonard, as they left the cave and stepped once more on to soft sand.

"What are there any bombs about?" replied Napoleon.

"Oh, I see. Are you really going to put Jim on the scent?"

"Certainly. I'll do no harm, anyway. Which way shall we walk? Left or right?"

"Shouldn't think it'd make much odds. It's guess-work, anyway."

"Not entirely. I want to know which way leads us soonest to a village. If we go to the right, there's Craverley, but that's about two miles off, isn't it? You know the geography of these parts better than I do."

"Yes, it's a devil of a way," answered Napoleon. "Everything's a devil of a way from here—station, church, and shops."

"Is there any village nearer?"

"How many huts make a village? There's a cluster of seven or eight. A little way round the point."

"Are they fishermen's huts, by any chance?"

"Shouldn't be surprised. Yes, now I come to think of it, I have spotted a boat or two on that beach. They're black, tarry huts. You know the sort of thing. If the world's going right with you, you say, 'Oh, what a lovely smell of ozone!' but if it's not you seize your nose and cry, 'Bad fish!'"

"I like the sound of it," commented Leonard. "Let's try it."

So they turned leftwards, and retraced their way over the heavy sand to the gap. On their right, the sea whispered gently through the darkness. The light from the wreck no longer glowed.

At the gap, they paused.

"Can we get round the point?"

queried Leonard.

"We'd have to climb over some jutting-out parts," replied Napoleon. "The tide's going out, but it's not low yet. Not a nice climb in the darkness, exactly."

"Can't we get to your settlement by road, then? It ought to be easier, and we'd out the long track round."

"Good idea. I think I know the way. It's up the gap and then straight on instead of bearing to the right, and then we strike off somewhere to the left. Yes, I believe I can hit it."

They ascended the steep path, and, veering away from the hotel lane, made their way across the neck of land that separated them from the north shore. Napoleon, to his own surprise even more than to his companion's, identified the correct lane that ultimately led to the little fishing settlement, and when they reached it he smiled triumphantly.

"Pretty good, eh?" he remarked, patting himself on the back.

"Thought, of course, all one had to do was to follow the smell and trace it to its source."

"Yes, the smell's certainly strong," agreed Leonard, "but I rather think the world must be going right with me at this moment. I like it."

Eight or nine tiny black cottages nestled near the shore. Only one of them showed a light, a feeble, yellow gleam, betokening a waxy origin; and as they approached even this winked out.

But they were not interested in the cottages. Their eyes were skinned for other things, and, all at once, Leonard gave a low exclamation of pleasure.

A black shape grew out of the sand ahead of them. Its outline was unmistakable. It was a small boat.

"Splendid," replied Napoleon, with a pang. "Now we're for it!"

The beach was utterly deserted, and the boat, fortunately, was not far from the edge of the water. The sands shelved more steeply here, and the distance covered by the tides was less extensive. Regardless of the law of possession, they ran the boat down to the water, and, obedient to Leonard's instructions, Napoleon climbed in.

"By the way, I suppose you can row?" queried Leonard, just before pushing off.

"On the Thames," answered Napoleon.

"Well, when we're beyond these little waves, we won't notice much difference. Get the oars out. You're going to do the work, while I navigate. Ready? Right! Heave—ho!"

He gave a shove, jumped, and the next moment they were gliding out into the mysterious velvet.

Distances and dimensions are exaggerated by night. Napoleon was astonished—very pleasantly so—by the smallness of the waves which had seemed so large while he had viewed their gleaming ridges from the shore. After a few strong strokes, they were beyond the breakers, and began to purr over an inky smooth expanse.

"By Jove!" murmured Napoleon. "I'd be perfectly happy if only there were a moon."

"And if I were somebody else?" queried Leonard.

"Yes, you could be improved on," admitted Napoleon. "All the same, I'm not complaining. But look here, I say—what about our direction?"

"Yes, that's going to be our chief difficulty. You see, Truelove, we're not starting from the spot I'd counted on. My compass reckoning has gone to pot. I expect we'll have to hug the shore a bit."

"No, we won't," exclaimed Napoleon suddenly. "There's the light again! Look!"

"So it is," murmured Leonard, gratefully. "That light is just going to save our lives!"

He whipped out his pocket compass, and got his bearings. Then, while Napoleon rowed, and he gave directions. The compass was a luminous one, and he did not have to use his flash lamp to see its face.

Napoleon rowed steadily. He decided not to think of the coming moments, but just to be satisfied that, so far, they had not come. When his companion told him to pull to the right, he generally pulled to the right. Occasionally he forgot which was his right and which his left, however, and then fresh bearings had to be taken when the light from the wreck reappeared.

"They're not over-careful with their lights, I must say," observed Leonard, presently. "I should have thought they'd have been as careful as the dove."

"That's assuming they have guilty consciences," retorted Napoleon. "Perhaps, you know, they haven't."

"It isn't usual to visit a wreck in the dead of night," Leonard reminded him.

"It may not be usual," agreed Napoleon. "But quite nice people do it. Have you noticed, the name of our boat is Daylight?"

"Well, isn't this the left—oh, no—my mistake," said Napoleon.

"You know, that's the trouble with rowing. You have to sit with your back to where you're going. Idiote idea. That's why I prefer punting. Oh—a punt, and Boulter's Look!"

They fell into a silence. They could not see the wreck, but they knew they were getting nearer every minute, and superstitious conversation became undesirable. Not only might their voices be heard, but it now became more necessary to concentrate on their task. The light had not glowed for some while, and Napoleon had been warned that he must keep as straight a course as was humanly possible.

"Wish the light would tune up again," he murmured, once.

"Between you and me, I'm rather glad it isn't," Leonard whispered back. "It may mean that whoever are on that wreck have moved to another part of the ship. Down below, for instance."

"Or it may mean they've spotted us, and are watching us," added Napoleon, grimly.

"Who's getting the sweet ideas now?" retorted Leonard. "But of course, you may be right. We're taking chances."

Five minutes later, Napoleon paused in his rowing.

"I can hear something," he muttered.

Opposite is shown the recently completed Greater Shanghai Municipality Administration Building at the new Civic Centre, Kiangwan. Chinese Independence Day, was marked by the opening of the building and spectacular dedication ceremonies included a procession of 10,000 people, an aerial display by aviators in the new military planes and a salute of 21 guns by Chinese gunboats anchored outside Woosung.

The picture above shows members of the long funeral procession, bearing the wreaths sent by the many friends of the late Mr. M. A. Mortaloff, officer in French Police Shanghai, who was killed by a gangster. The photo below shows a file of French Police as they awaited the finish of the religious ceremony in the Orthodox Church in Rue Paul Henri.

The s.s. Shanghai Maru, which arrived in Shanghai last week brought from Japan symbols for the two shrines erected near the entrance to Hongkew Park. Their arrival was the cause of a ceremony wherein Mr. L. Ishii, Consul General, and Admiral Sugisaka, of the Naval Landing Force, led a party of notable to meet the ship. The upper photograph shows the Nagasaki Maru, which was specially decorated for the occasion, while the lower picture is a view of Mr. Ishii (with first box) and Admiral Sugisaka carrying the house containing the symbols which will be kept at the Japanese Consulate-General until the beginning of ceremonies at the end of the month.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Today's Contract Problem

How would you, as South, arrive at a small slam contract with the following hand, when you open with one spade? How would you play the hand if West's opening lead is the deuce of diamonds? Here's a tip—West has the singleton 'queen' of hearts.

North: ♠ None ♥ K73
♦ Q104 ♣ KJ9
882

East: Blind.
South: ♠ A J 9 4 3 ♥ A J 10
♦ 8 4 4
♣ A 10 ♠ None

West: Blind.
Solution in next issue. 0

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

The opening lead by the defence presents a cue to the solution of the last problem. Often this lead locates the only important card the declarer wants to place. That's enough to plan the proper attack for game.

The hand presented here was played by Miss Ellnor Murdoch, runner-up to Mr. David Burnstine, who won the National Masters' Individual Contract Championship in New York recently.

The Bidding

The bidding was South one heart; West pass, North one spade, East pass, South two hearts, West pass, North bid four hearts and Miss Murdoch in the South passed.

The Play

West's opening lead was the king of clubs, which Miss Murdoch won with the ace. The opening lead showed West with the queen of clubs and this was the important card.

Miss Murdoch now played the ace and king of hearts, picking up the outstanding trump. She could see that she must lose one club—her problem was to keep from losing three diamonds.

She cashed the ace and king of spades in dummy, led a small spade and trumped in her own hand. She then led a heart, winning in dummy with the queen, and then led the last spade from dummy, trumping in her own hand.

Her next play was a small club which she knew West must win with the queen. West was helpless—if he led a club, Miss Murdoch would ruff in one hand and discard a diamond from the other, thereby losing only two diamonds.

While if he cashed his ace of diamonds, this would permit her to win a trick with her king, which gave her the needed trick for game.

POLICE RESERVES IN CLASH WITH MOB

DETROIT, Oct. 31.

Wild scenes were witnessed today when police reserves were called out to disperse a mob of 2,500 men in 300 motor cars. The rioters hurled missiles, smashed windows and overturned motor cars.

The raid was carried out as a demonstration against tool and die workers returning to work during a strike in the industry. Reuter.

BULL FIGHT IN ROYAL PARK

HELD AT BAY WITH A STICK

Mr. Charles Hill, who lives at Prince Consort-cottages, Windsor, has revealed his narrow escape when he was suddenly attacked by one of the Highland bullocks in Windsor Great Park.

Accompanied by his wife and two children, Mr. Hill was returning down one of the avenues of the Long Walk, and when near the double gates the party came across a herd of Highland cattle.

Mr. Hill said he particularly noticed a large bullock standing in the far avenue on the opposite side of the road. Describing his adventure he said:

"Suddenly the animal rushed straight at us with a loud bellow.
I told my wife to get behind the trees and to distract the attention of the bullock I ran to meet it.
When a couple of yards distant the animal put its head to the ground and threw up its hind legs, I lashed out with the stick I was carrying and eventually the beast swerved and allowed me to proceed."

"By this time my wife and children had reached the gates and the lodge-keeper, who had been attracted by the screams of my daughter, came out."

The herd was brought by the King to Windsor Great Park about 18 months ago. It is understood that the herd has just been sold and will be replaced by about 100 younger animals of the same breed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hubbard
Mrs. F. H. Stratton, Captain Turner-
Coles and Major General M. Umeczu, were among passengers who sailed aboard the s.s. Asama Maru to-day.

ATTEMPT TO ROB P. O. ALLEGED

CONVICTED OF CONSPIRACY

An allegation that defendants at one time contemplated robbing the Shamshui Post Office was made by Inspector Elston at the Kowloon Magistrate's this morning when he charged four men before Mr. Wynne-Jones with possession of vegetable choppers fit for an unlawful purpose, conspiracy, and possession of weapons without a permit.

Defendants were Leung Yuk, Lo
Woon, Leung Yau and Kong
Cheung. The first three admitted being in possession of the choppers but the fourth denied the charge.

Inspector Elston stated that he received information a few days ago that defendants intended to rob the Shamshui Post Office, but the scheme fell through because the Post Office closed earlier than usual on the day in question as it happened to be a Chinese festival day. Later on, information was received to the effect that the defendants had their eyes on No. 445 Reclamation Street.

The Police had the house surrounded and a close watch kept.
At about 9 a.m. yesterday, the four defendants was seen in the vicinity of No. 445 Reclamation Street and were arrested.

ARMED WITH CHOPPERS.
The first defendant had a chopper fastened to his girdle, while the second had two such instruments and the third another. The fourth defendant had no chopper, but all four had lamp wicks and strings, which the Police alleged, could be used as gags. A coil of wire was also found in their possession.

Defendants denied the charge of conspiracy and this was accepted.

RUSSIAN TO BE EXPELLED

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION

Vladimir Lich Malkoff, aged 23, unemployed, was charged before Mr. Balfour this morning with entering the Colony without a valid passport. Defendant arrived here from Canton aboard the s.s. Kwong Tung last Sunday.

Detective-Sergeant Mottram said defendant had a passport issued in Shanghai on October 21 last year, which was valid for a year. He was arrested on suspicion in another case in Wanchai.
He was on his way to Swatow where he expected money at the post-restaurant. He was on bail of $50, and Police asked for a small fine and an expulsion order.
They did not regard him as a desirable character and he was not the sort of man who would be permitted to enter Hongkong ordinarily.

A fine of $25 was imposed and an expulsion order made.

Inspector Elston also accepted the statement of the fourth defendant, as no weapon was found on him, and he was therefore discharged.
The Magistrate.—The first and third charges are alternative ones, aren't they?

Inspector Elston.—Yes, we put in the third on advice.

What are these men, do you know? They have not been in Hongkong long. We understand that they attempted to get work at Shingmun.

Inspector Elston submitted that it was clear that defendants intended to rob No. 445 Reclamation Street, and asked his Worship to inflict the maximum penalty.

Sentence of 12 months each was passed on the three remaining defendants.
